Self Government, Good Joke

WHAT we call SELF government may not be real, but it is at least amusing. Statesmen, of the political boss type, spent yesterday "conferring," which means discussing various deals, to decide on a Democratic candidate. After they decide, you will have the pleasure of getting excited about the man thus chosen, and will vote for him—unless you happen to belong to another party.

WHAT the PEOPLE want means nothing. The insiders ask upon whom can we agree? What man, sufficiently eligible to save us from being ridiculous, will suit us all, and those for whom we work?

Nobody asks, in that inside conference, "Whom do the voters want?" or, "What candidate has deserved a nomination?" It is purely a question of political expediency, and agreement among bosses. If they can find a man who will stand hitched, keep his promises to the men that name him, regardless of platform promises, that is the man you will get for candidate.

OCCASIONALLY, as in 1896, when Bryan nominated himself, a man not selected by the insiders gets the nomination. But that happens rarely, and when it does happen, the bosses on both sides unite to beat such an upstart.

IN THIS case, just one thing seems agreed upon. McAdoo, who came to the convention with the biggest support, almost half of all the delegates, must get out.

All bosses and the "big men" they work for, are agreed on THAT.

Whether they can put the program through you will know, perhaps, today or tomorrow.

The suggestion that McAdoo quit "for the sake of party harmony" is interestingly preposterous. McAdoo, of course, will not do anything as yellow as that. His men may quit him, if THEY are yellow. But he will stick.

Newspaper men that watched him fighting high finance, when he forced through the Hudson tunnels, and when he ran the railroads and regulated bond interest rates against Wall Street's mandate know that he is no quitter.

MCADOO has doubled his strength throughout the country, since the Convention began. Those that know him only by dim hearsay, know ONE definite thing now.

They know that the whole gang of financial and corporation highbinders hate him, and want him beaten, no matter who else may be chosen. And that is about as good a recommendation as the voters would ask for any candidate. It is the recommendation to which La Follette owes his influence, and to which he will owe a big vote, without the help of any party.

THE PUBLIC interest is divided between the Democratic Convention and the White House, with deepest concern and sympathy concentrated upon the President and his wife, in their great anxiety.

ALL fathers and mothers should be put on their guard by the illness of the President's son. The boy wore shoes, or sandals, with no stockings, as thousands of boys and girls do, every day, in Summer.

THAT IS MOST DANGEROUS.

THE EARTH, everywhere, is impregnated with dangerous germs, including the germ of lockjaw, and innumerable other germs that may cause blood poisoning, if a slight wound be neglected.

THE FEET, and especially the toes, are more easily infected than any other external part of the body.

Cramped for generations in shoes, deprived of their natural blood supply, very often the toes lose their power of resistance to germ attack. Constantly, you read of blood poisoning that starts in the foot.

WEARING shoes without stockings, neglecting a cut, or

ELKS HERD CAPTURES BOSTON

Lodges Arrive by Train and Boat; Navy Sham Battle Today

By BERT FORD.

Boston's streets rang with martial music and the tramp of marching feet today as delegation after delegation of Elks and their families arrived for the sixtieth annual convention of the Grand Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

As the late-comers registered the program of the second day was well under way, and they had to scamper to catch up with schedule.

As this was "Navy Day" on the program major interest centred at Boston Navy Yard and in the fighting ships that were sent here by the Navy Department to join in the exercises. The navy yard was open to sightseers all day.

SHAM BATTLE.

A sham battle and other maneuvers took place between battleships, destroyers and submarines with seaplanes as supporting agencies. Sailors fought marines in the mimic warfare.

The members of grand lodge and their ladies went for a harbor sail at 11 o'clock. They sailed from Rowe's wharf on the steamer Rose Standish. They are scheduled to return at 4 p. m. There was great lollification aboard, with music and buffet luncheon.

At 4 o'clock the Third Battalion

ROSETTA DUNCAN AFTER ENCOUNTER WITH POLICE

Member of the famous Duncan Sisters who charges she was brutally attacked by policemen in Cicero, Ill., a Chicago suburb, following an auto mishap. She received several bruises and broken bones. She is shown here with her attending physician. Civil suits against the police are planned by the dancer and her sisters as a result of the alleged attack.

POLICE ACCUSE MISS DUNCAN

Chicago, July 7.—Rosetta Duncan of the Duncan Sisters, stars in "Topsy and Eva," a musical comedy playing a long engagement at a local theatre, declares she was beaten up by several policemen of Cicero, a suburban community not unknown in local police circles.

Chicago policemen who have occasion to visit Cicero usually go in details, as the gangsters there have hard fists and nervous trigger fingers.

The Cicero police, on the other hand, admit that there was considerable beating going on, but declare that it was Rosette who beat up the cops.

So the now-famous fracas that happened during the holiday automobile ride in which the two Duncan sisters and a few of their friends were taking the air, threatens to need a Solomon to determine what really happened, when the case gets into court.

Rosetta, reclining on a divan in her boudoir, tells sympathetic callers that she has a broken nose and a fractured rib. But, she says, she is well enough to continue in the show with her sister, Vivian, despite her broken bones.

Out in Cicero Officers Benjamin De Laney and Charles Widlock are displaying various marks that appear to be scratches, bruises and cuts. They are the two officers with whom the pretty actress admits she had "an altercation."

They will face assault charges in court Friday.

HOT SPELL IS NEARING END

What appeared to be a break in the hot wave came at 1 o'clock this afternoon, when the temperature dropped to 81 degrees. It had been 82 at noon. Yesterday at 1 o'clock thermometers of undoubted veracity registered 83.

Weather conditions are to be unsettled for some days according to the new weatherman, and this condition will get going tonight or tomorrow with showers and shifting winds.

Before the break came the heat wave had claimed fourteen victims, most of them being drowned in an effort to achieve comfort.

COOLIDGE BOY HAS CHANCE

Washington, July 7.—Calvin Coolidge, Jr., son of the President, after a night when he was at the very point of death three times, today held grimly to life after a crisis which his physicians said gave him "a little more than a fighting chance."

As the hours passed today he barely maintained the very slight improvement which occurred when hope had almost been abandoned. No nourishment could be administered, however, and all reliance was centered on the strength of his constitution, already sapped by four days of raging fever and acute pain.

President and Mrs. Coolidge, except for a ride to the White House for breakfast, were constantly with their son. Three times during the night they were called from an adjoining room when it was feared he was about to die.

At midnight oxygen was administered and a blood transfusion was resorted to. Two enlisted men of Walter Reed Army Hospital volunteered for the operation.

Throughout the day the physicians were in close consultation. They were encouraged by young Calvin's unsuspected ability to withstand so stubbornly the ravages of the blood poisoning which has enveloped his body from a blistered foot, but they made it very clear that his condition still was extremely critical and that he had already suffered as much as the human body could be called upon to survive.

It became evident that the disease

BUTTERFLY PAID FOR GAY LIFE

Stella McCulloch, New Hampshire Girl, Dead of Poison in Broadway Tragedy

Stella McCulloch, a pretty little country girl to whom Portsmouth, N. H., represented the last word in metropolitan gaiety until she turned Broadway butterfly two or three years ago, has paid with her life for her giddy hours along the primrose path.

On Broadway she was known as "Ruth Hollister," who once played a small part in "Kiki," and had a "daddy" who paid the bills.

In Greenland, four miles outside of Portsmouth, she was "the Flint girl," who lived on the Mell farm, and had been married to a man named McCulloch, and divorced him.

Her life on Broadway ran the life of all the butterflies who have flitted along that thoroughfare to their own undoing.

An artist's model, who had prettiness instead of beauty; an actress who had ambition in place of talent; a girl who found the straight, hard road to success too uninteresting, and took the easiest way; that was Stella McCulloch.

PEISTER IS HELD.

Of late she had been much in the company of one Jacob Peister, a man of means, professionally kind to pretty country girls ready to pay any price for the privilege of following the butterfly trail to the end.

Saturday night he let himself in to her apartment at No. 8 East Thirtieth street—with his own latchkey.

He found her lying across her bed, half-dressed, as he later told the police. Whiskey bottles littered the room. It was in disorder. There were indications of a party. The girl was dead.

Peister immediately informed the authorities and professed great sorrow at the death of the little girl from the country. Notwithstanding which, he was locked up for questioning, and was still being cross-examined today, according to advices from New York.

POISON THEORY.

At first the police thought the girl's death was caused by alcoholism. Later they stated there was little doubt she had been poisoned.

Taking Peister's story at its face value for the present, the New York police have instituted a search for a man supposed to have been with Mrs. McCulloch the night of her death.

Peister is a bachelor of thirty-five, well dressed, sleek, plausible. He spills his only grief he is held without bail.

Medical Examiner Vance, who performed an autopsy, said it was his opinion the girl had died either from drinking bad whiskey or excessive use of good whiskey.

TOLD OF QUARREL.

The police were not satisfied however, and continued to investigate her recent movements and to interrogate Peister.

Her friends said she was sometimes known as "Mrs. Peister." It

Kalamazoo Never Will Be Same to George Again

George H. Wiers of Kalamazoo, Mich., who is attending the convention, declares that he never before was out of the city limits of Kalamazoo. The Michigan delegation support his statement. Wiers is a grocer. He declares his wife will have a "hot time keeping me cooped up in Kalamazoo from now on."

U. S. ATHLETES TAKE LEAD IN OLYMPICS

Olympic Stadium, Colombes, France, July 7.—The United States went into the lead this afternoon for the first time since the athletic meet started in conjunction with the Olympic games being held here, the Yankee athletes winning first places in two events, putting America's total of points at the top.

F. Morgan Taylor of Grinnell College, Iowa, won the 400 meters low hurdles, shattering the official world's record by finishing in 52 3-5 seconds, while a short time later Harold Osborne of the Illinois A. C. broke a new Olympic record in the high jump, making a leap of 6 feet 6 inches.

Robert Legendre of Newark, N. J., in the Pentathlon, broke the world's record for the broad jump with 7.76 meters, equivalent to 25 feet 6 inches.

This performance insured him first place in this event. His jump betwen by three inches the former world's mark of 25 feet 3 inches, held by E. O. Hamlin of Boston.

Plaskett of Great Britain also was disqualified in the 400 meter hurdles for knocking over three hurdles.

Thus only four of the competitors gained points, Riley of the United States moving up to third place, with Andre of France to fourth, as the result of the elimination of Brookins.

Taylor's time in this event eclipses the world's Olympic mark of 54 seconds made by F. F. Loomis, United States, in 1920, but is a half second slower than the best time for the distance made by Riley this year.

As Taylor knocked over the two

53 LOSS FOR McADOO IN 80TH

Missouri's 36 Go to Glass, Who Shows a Total Gain of 51; Smith Gains 1

Madison Square Garden, New York, July 7.—Senator Carter Glass of Virginia leaped into the top list of Democratic candidates in the convention today when Missouri shifted its thirty-six votes from McAdoo on the eightieth ballot and cast them for him.

This was followed by a return to Glass of the ten Virginia votes which had been going to McAdoo. Glass gained a total of fifty-one votes, McAdoo lost fifty-three and Smith gained one on this ballot.

The vote of the four leaders stood: McAdoo 454.5, Smith 367.5, Glass 58, Davis 73.5.

Madison Square Garden, July 7.—Brushing aside the pending proposals for suspending the rules and to release delegates, the Democratic National Convention today went back to the dreary business of balloting for President.

The first ballot today showed little change in the voting, the only one of any note being the breaking up of the Virginia delegation which gave 10 votes to McAdoo and 14 to Carter Glass.

Opposition of the fifteen minority candidates to the proposals to end the deadlock including Governor Smith and the counter proposition by McAdoo were reported. An attempt to refer the proposals to the rules committee, led by McAdoo men, was defeated by a large vote.

The effect of the move, which was beaten, was that a report from the rules committee to eliminate the two-thirds rule, could have been adopted by a majority of the convention, whereas a two-thirds majority now is required.

McAdoo's letter and counterproposal, which included the abrogation of the two-thirds rule and the unit rule, progressive nomination of the low candidate on succeeding ballots, and the right of delegates remaining to cast the votes of those who have gone home was read to the convention.

The latter was the same as one previously published except that it contained the provision that plans for breaking the deadlock which does not accomplish the purpose will disappoint the expectations of the convention."

The McAdoo proposal was rejected, the report said, although some of the representatives of the fifteen expressed willingness to assent to some feature of it.

At the conclusion of the reading Gavin McNab of California asked to know about the missing ballings of the chair regarding the unit rule.

Then Bruce Kremer of Montana, a McAdoo man, moved the suspension of the rules so that the set of proposals could be referred to the rules committee for research.

Newton D. Baker and William Jennings Bryan both claimed recognition of the chair. Senator Walsh ordered Kremer's motion read again for the clear information of the delegates. Then the chair recognized Baker.

WITHOUT ROLL CALL.

Baker developed that a report of the rules committee, favoring a change in the rules, could be adopted by a majority of the convention instead of a two-thirds majority.

Chairman Walsh agreed that that was correct.

On an aye and no vote, the motion to suspend the rules and refer the proposals to the rules committee, the noes had it, without a roll call.

With that, the convention went back to calling the roll of States for balloting.

A resolution later was offered by former Governor Gilchrist of Florida. It proposed that the rules be suspended for the adoption of a resolution, which in turn would adopt the proposals embodied in the report of the conferees on the over-Sunday negotiations.

The proceedings were held up for a moment while McAdoo leaders conferred on the platform. A delegate insisted the resolution read again, but it developed the official stenographer had disappeared with it.

The reading was postponed until the end of the seventy-ninth ballot.

VIRGINIA BREAKS.

The Virginia delegation broke on the first ballot and gave ten votes to McAdoo. The remaining 14 were all instal to Senator Carter Glass.

West Virginia also broke for the first time and gave one vote to McAdoo. The remaining 15 were all instal to John W. Davis.

The breaks in the Virginia and West Virginia delegations gave the McAdoo people on the floor a chance for some cheering.

In North Carolina McAdoo lost two and a half; Underwood gained it; John W. Davis gained one also.

There was no change in the voting until Colorado was reached and there McAdoo gained a half vote. Smith lost one, Davis lost a half. In Florida Smith lost one. In Illinois Smith gained five and McAdoo was overturned. McAdoo lost a half vote in Maine.

BACK TO FERRIS.

Michigan restored its vote entirely going back to Ferris with seventeen and giving Underwood three. It took eight and a half from McAdoo and five an a one-half from Smith. Robinson got two from Minnesota.

It was all obvious through the first ballot of today—the seventy-eighth, that if the delegates were looking for a place to go they still were looking around for it.

Nebraska quit Governor Bryan entirely on this ballot and gave to Senator Walsh of Montana the two votes which had been hanging for him there. Senator Walsh picked up three in New Hampshire taking them from McAdoo. Ohio gave a slightly changed alignment, but the vote was scattered among seven candidates with Smith getting almost half of them.

At the end of the first ballot the leaders stood this way:

McAdoo 311, Smith 363.5, Davis 73.5.

This was a loss of two for McAdoo a loss of three and a half for Smith and three for Davis.

OVERRULES QUIGLEY.

Mayor Lawrence Quigley of Chelsea, Mass., questioned the accuracy of the announced result of the seventy-eighth ballot by contending that the ceiling under which Nevada's six votes were cast for McAdoo was wrong because the pod had shown one and a half for Smith, one and one-half absent and three for McAdoo, He was overruled by Chairman Walsh.

The seventy-ninth ballot developed little but a challenge of the vote of the Canal Zone six, which had been voting for McAdoo under the unit rule.

This was a loss of three and a half for McAdoo, a gain of three for Smith and a loss of two and a half for Davis.

Call to order at 11 a. m., Eastern daylight saving time, by Chairman Thomas J. Walsh.

BANDIT LOOTS STORE, TAKEN AFTER CHASE

Crowd Gives Alarm in Dedham as Robber Leaves Grocery

A daylight store holdup, followed by a chase by police which ended in the arrest of a negro, and in which the man gave morning shoppers in Dedham square a series of thrills rivaling the screen-owned "movie knockouts."

When it was finally "end" the reallife "reel" found Robert Winslow, a dapper young man from Brewster, N. Y., lodged in a police cell charged with looting the safe register of the S. K. Ames chain store at No. 578 Main street.

Manager George E. Bonney identified Winslow at the station as the youth who held him up with a revolver and escaped more than $22 from store cash drawer.

NEAR POLICE STATION.

The S. K. Ames store is located fifty yards from the police station and twenty-five yards from the Dedham depot of the New Haven road.

Winslow, the police allege, entered the store while Bonney was alone. He ordered a pound of cheese, six dozen eggs and other supplies "for a summer camp." He told Bonney that the young lady would call for the articles.

He said to Bonney: "Say, I wish you'd get me a couple of empty bags for the samp—small paper bags." There were in the rear room of the store. Bonney left the counter to get the bags. He turned suddenly and faced a gun.

ROBBED TILL.

Bonney turned out his pockets, and while the young robber held the revolver muzzle to his stomach he removed all the cash in the till. There were in the tray $22, which had been voting for McAdoo under the unit rule.

This was a loss of three and a half for McAdoo, a gain of three for Smith and a loss of two and a half for Davis.

LOVE FOR AUTO THIEF SUSPECT JAILS GIRL

Marion Riney Arrested Herself When She Accompanies Friend to Court

If Marion Riney of the Back Bay didn't love Clair Cassidy so much she wouldn't be in jail today.

And, unless Clair Cassidy alleged auto thief and fugitive from justice, raises $1,500 bail for Marion, she'll remain in jail until she is given a hearing on charges of violating the automobile license laws.

Clair drove over to East Cambridge Court in a touring car where he was to be given a hearing on a complaint charging him with being a fugitive from Maine. There he is wanted for alleged larceny of automobiles.

Marion went with him. She sat in the machine while Clair entered court.

Captain Timothy Leahy of the Cambridge police followed Cassidy out when the judge continued his case until October. He was released on the same bail. Cassidy approach ed the car in which Marion sat. It was backed out. Then Marion was locked under arrest forthwith.

Captain Leahy recognized the girl. He had a warrant for her and she was placed under arrest forthwith.

Expostulating and sobbing, she was led into the corridors arraigned for the automobile law violations and held in $1,000 for a hearing.

Miss Riney "put one over" on police of Station 3 Cambridge, a short time ago when, after a collision on Cambridge street, while driving Cassidy's car, she "dashed" her sweetheart's license. Because the police man believed she was "Clair Cassidy" she was not charged with driving without a license.

Marion was speeding toward East Cambridge jail, where Cassidy was being held, at the time of the crash with a vendor's wagon. Cassidy had sent for her. He was released on bail after a short arraignment.

Last December in Portsmouth, N. H. Marion was taken into custody, police say, for forging Cassidy's name to a check. Cassidy appeared in court, however, and saved her from punishment when he told the court she had a perfect right to sign his name to checks.

He refused to prosecute and the case was dropped.

BOY SETS SELF AFIRE AS HE STARTS BOAT

Daniel S. Cushing, No. 194 Bixby street, Mattapan was severely burned when he accidentally set fire to a motorboat at Commercial Wharf, which he later confessed he had tried to steal, the police say.

After he entered the boat at midnight, he said, he rummaged about until he found a kerosene lamp. He lighted it. Then as he was about to proceed to start the motor, the lamp slipped from his grasp, crashed to the bottom of the boat and fanned with his clothes and the craft.

Physicians do not expect the boy to recover.

U. S. DESTROYER PULLED OFF ROCKS

Portsmouth, N. H., July 7.—The United States destroyer Brooks, which went on the rocks at Fort Point at the mouth of the Piscataqua River, Fort Constitution, New Castle, was pulled off and is now at the Portsmouth Navy Yard.

Damage to the vessel was slight according to officials, and the ship will be docked some time today, when the extent of the damage will be determined.

COOLIDGE STAMP HAS BEEN ISSUED

Washington, July 7.—A brand new Coolidge stamp made its appearance today. Not an honest to goodness postage stamp, for the law forbids the placing of the picture of any living person on U. S. stamps. But the Coolidge stamp is the regulation size, with gum on the back, and the perforations, and on the front, printed in Yale blue color, a full face picture and underneath the words "Keep Cool Coolidge," which is to be the slogan of the campaign.

CHURCHES REJECT SERVICE BY RADIO

Pastorless Episcopal churches in country towns reject services by radio. The Rev. E. S. Rousmaniere, D. DEMOCRATS TAKE REINS IN PORTUGAL

Lisbon, Portugal, July 7.—A new cabinet has been formed to replace that headed by Alvaro Castro, which resigned June 26. The premier and minister of home affairs is Rodrigues Gaspard. Premier Gaspard was at one time minister of the colonies; a majority of his cabinet are members of the Democratic party.

Elk Delegate Comes by Airplane When Auto Cracks

Frank S. Neighbor, delegate from Newark, Ohio, arrived at the Elks' convention today in an airplane. He left Newark with his family in an automobile, but the machine cracked under the strain in Buffalo Saturday.

When it became apparent that he would be late for the convention if he waited till the auto was repaired, Delegate Neighbor chartered an aerial taxi and came on, leaving Buffalo at daybreak and arriving at the East Boston field at 8 a. m.

As he had some hours to spare he accepted an invitation to take a ride down the harbor in a speedy hydroplane, just to round out his adventures.

The Neighbor family, minus its head, will remain in Buffalo, until the "old boy" is fixed up. Then they will motor on and join papa.

MAN'S NECK BROKEN AS WOOL BALE FALLS

While piling bales of wool in a Summer street store house, William J. Patterson, 23 years old, of No. 85 Saratoga street, East Boston, was struck by one of the falling bales and his neck was broken.

Patterson was working for Howe Bros. & Co. in their building at No. 321 Summer st. Patterson's co-workers were leaving the room when they heard a heavy thud and a scream. Rushing back they removed the bale from Patterson and called the police. He was taken to the Haymarket Relief station.

ASKS COURT TO STOP WIFE WRITING NOTES

Charles W. Wickham appeared in the Equity Motion Session of Suffolk Superior court today to ask that his wife be enjoined him from writing to the Supreheating Company which employs him, and the various hotels at which he stops when on the road. He explained that the letters embarrassed him and might cause him to lose his job. Through counsel, Mrs. Wickham agreed that she would stop writing the letters and making equally embarrassing telephone calls.

SHIP OR DANCE HALL? THAT'S THE PROBLEM

Will Let the Grand Jury Say Whether Barge Is for Passengers or Dancing

In the Central Court today, Judge Parmenter refused to rule whether the barge Dunconia, erstwhile Jacob Lantern, is a passenger vessel or a dance hall.

The question came before him on complaint of the Boston police that the barge is a dance hall under the meaning of the statutes, and doing business as a dance hall after being refused a license as such.

Captain David Callahan of the barge, an ditz owners, declared that it was a licensed vessel under the federal statutes, that Captain Callahan is a licensed master of passenger vessels, and that the local authorities have no jurisdiction over the ship.

Judge Parmenter declared that he did not feel competent to decide and passed the matter up to the grand jury.

The police allege that the Dunconia cannot be properly supervised as a public dance hall in the harbor, and refused her a dance hall license on that ground.

Injection of serum to fight the condition had to be resorted to and the battle became one between the power of the poison and the endurance of the boy's heart in carrying the injections necessary to check the disease.

Physicians said today that the boy was under gas, rather than ether, during Saturday's operation.

WOMAN DYING, MAN SOUGHT BY POLICE

Brockton Man Fires at Housekeeper When She Refuses Him Money, She Says

Brockton, July 7.—Because she refused to lend him money with which to pay his tailor's bill, John Papenia, forty-five, of No. 97 Spring street, it is alleged, fired six shots at Miss Lena Paine, thirty-eight, his housekeeper, today. At least three of the shots took effect. She is not expected to live.

Metropolitan and State police are scouring the immediate territory for Papenia, who fled after the shooting.

Neighbors, who heard the shooting, which came as the culmination of an all-day quarrel, they say, notified the police. The stricken woman was rushed to a hospital, where she dictated a dying statement, but was so weakened by the telling that she was unable to sign it at the close.

Miss Paine said that all day yesterday and last night Papenia insisted she loan him money, saying he needed it to pay the tailor. She consistently refused to comply with his request.

After both had retired for the night, she came downstairs to get a drink of water. As she raised the glass to her lips, she heard his heavy breathing near her. Turning, she found herself confronted with Papenia, gun in hand.

Again he is alleged to have demanded money and again she refused.

Then, she says, he fired point-blank the six cartridges in his weapon. Only one of the bullets has been found in the house. Three have been found in the dying woman's body. Doctors believe she may have been hit by the other two as well.

KIDNAPED BOY, NOW SAFE AT HOME, WAS WITNESS OF MURDER

SAW MAN SLAIN BY WOMAN

North Dighton Child in Mystery Rivalling That of Charlie Ross

North Dighton, July 7.—Russell Everett Smith, who was kidnaped here five years ago, is home, and the story of his wanderings is ended. But it has ended only to begin anew.

Locked in the brain of the nine year-old youngster is the secret of a murder that he witnessed, while in the custody of his kidnapers, the murder of a crazed husband by his frightened wife.

Five years ago last April, little Russell then four, played with a kitten in the garden in front of the bungalow of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smith. His mother passed by the kitchen door and smiled at her happy and carefree tot.

"Yes, supper will be ready in a few minutes, Russell," she said. Ten minutes later when she went to call the child he was no to be found.

I the five years that elapsed, Mrs. Smith ran down innumerable clews about her son.

About a year ago, a youngster in a dazed condition was picked up in the bright light district of Chicago and taken to the "Loop." He was handed over to the authorities and later placed with a kindly old German woman, Mrs. Lessie D. Heinzelman, No. 7715 Langley avenue, with both power of speech and memory gone, his fragile mind a broken wreck from the ghoulish shape heaped upon him and from the murder he had witnessed.

RECOVERS FACULTIES.

A friend from Springfield chanced to call at the Heinzelman home recently. He was asked if he ever heard of Taunton.

"Why surely, that's near Boston," he replied. The police of Boston and Taunton were communicated with. Mrs. Smith got the news. Chicago was a long way she thought, but home sprang eternal in her breast.

She consulted the Boston American for advice and help and was was assured every resource of the Hearst newspapers would be placed at her disposal to unite her and the boy. The Boston American gave her a letter to the Chicago American which on her arrival in Chicago placed an automobile at her disposal, and furnished her an escort through the intricacies of her long battle to regain her son.

AT COURT HEARING.

There was a hearing in the Chicago Juvenile Court to prove the identity of the child before Judge Victor P. Lawson, who declared the case the "outstanding mystery of my eight years' experience in this court.

"If he is really your boy Mrs. Smith," said Mrs. Heinzelman before the hearing as her eyes dimmed with sorrow, "I want you to have him."

When the hearing began, Mrs. Smith showed a photograph of the boy taken when he was three years old. There was a striking resemblance, at once perceived by all the court attaches.

Next Mrs. Smith told of an operation performed upon the lad's left eye by Dr. Albert E. Hazen of Providence, which left a cast and scar.

Judge Lawson was thereupon convinced beyond reasonable doubt that Arthur Tyne was the Russell Everett Smith of the five years' mystery.

After the hearing, Mrs. Smith visited the Heinzelman home for tea and then learned from Mrs. Heinzelman the terrible secret of the child's brain, the story of the murder.

"Mother killed daddy!" cried Russell to Mrs. Heinzelman one evening, when his powers of speech were returning. Mrs. Heinzelman at once understood the child was trying to tell to those who had been kind to him, something he had witnessed and which he had been warned never to reveal. The crime followed by the threat of death would be sufficient to unbalance the child it was realized.

Slowly Mrs. Heinzelman led the lad on his graphic recital. He related how he had two mothers, a black mother and a white mother. The black mother was not kind to him. She put him in a hotel every day when she went out to work.

STORY OF MURDER.

From this he jumped to the story of the murder.

Trembling with emotion, dark shadows under his eyes, and in a frenzy, as if his growing mind was struggling to free itself of the memories of the gruesome crime it had recorded, he screamed:

"Mother is killing daddy."

He told how his "father" entered a room in a fury, brandishing a hatchet and going swiftly toward the wife. Screams of woman, man and horrified child filled the room. The woman stood her ground. The man approached closer until the woman seized a gun and fired a shot through his body.

At this point in the narrative, the tiny frame of the youngster Russell trembled in the very fury of the passions he was describing. At once he picked up the narrative and played the part of the father. He put his hand to his chest and muttered and fell prostrate on the floor.

NEVER REFERRED TO AGAIN.

Mrs. Heinzelman was shocked beyond expression. She rushed to the youngster, and tenderly picked him up and folded him in her arms. She nestled him softly to her and hushed him to sleep, and laid him fondly to rest on his couch.

Mrs. Heinzelman never again asked the child to repeat his story, for the narration of it "took too much out of the child," and she feared for the well-being of his mind if the subject were renewed soon.

Meanwhile the mother ha scovered the threats that whoever took the child abused him; that he did actually witness a murder and that the survivors of it threatened him so severely if he revealed what had happened that little or none of its details can be obtained from him; that following the murder, he was turned adrift in Chicago, where he was picked up in a dazed condition with power of speech and mind gone —which experts say could easily happen if the story of his experience is true.

BOSTON STEAMSHIP RAMS N. Y. FERRY

New York, July 7.—The steamship New York from Boston rammed the Erie ferry boat Arlington outside the latter's North River slip off Warren street this morning. No one on either vessel was injured, but a fifteen-foot hole was torn in the cabin of the ferry several feet above the water line.

The Arlington was approaching her slip when the New York, which was edging into her own pier nearby, veered toward the smaller boat. The passengers on the latter hurried from the rail and, when the crash came, no one was close enough to be hurt by the flying glass and splinters.

Popular Summer
Bedspreads

Why? Because they are so pretty and in good style. The crinkly background is a soft cream, with silky stripes of self color, rose, blue, lavender or gold; the edges are neatly scalloped. Then they're all cool looking, light in weight—though strong; easy to handle, easy to wash, fast colors and don't have to be ironed. All this makes them particularly seasonable and desirable for summer homes in the country; though it is hard to get anything for the price so pretty and suitable for year-round service in the city.

The 72x108 is $8; the 90x108 is $9. These cover the whole bed; in sets with shams the 72x99 is $9.50; 90x99, $10.50. Don't select that new spread until you've at least seen these.

Smart Set Bending Energies Toward Aiding Girls, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN

IF [illegible] the grandchildren of the good old summertime, with the leading [illegible] and [illegible] waiting [illegible] fail to serve some [illegible] folks from their pet philanthropies.

A notable group are heeding their efforts to make a distinct success of the campaign [illegible] week to enroll a host of friends for girls.

Prominent among the sponsors are Mesdames Philip T. de Normandie, Clarence H. Edwards, John W. Hallowell, John F. Moors, Lois B. Rantoul, Roger Wolcott and Philip W. Wrenn.

Mrs. Lois B. Rantoul

Others directly connected with the campaign include Miss Louisa Hunnewell, Mrs. A. Lawrence Lowell, Mrs. Charles K. Cummings, Mrs. James Jackson, Jr., and Mrs. Charles Hopkinson.

When Mrs. Alexander Murray recently arrived on the North Shore for a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Neal Rantoul at their Beverly Farms place she received a right royal welcome from her host of friends.

For in her "Ad" Rantoul days she was one of Boston's most dazzling belles. Talented too, and several Unicorn Club productions were made the brighter for her presence in the cast.

Since the former Miss Rantoul's marriage to Dr. Murray her home has been in Ontario, but she is not an infrequent visitor here. Later in the season, Dr. and Mrs. Murray plan to go abroad.

Another Boston girl has given her heart to an old-fashioned man. This time it's Miss Eleanor Seavey of Boston and Hamilton, and the lucky man is Richard Matthew Griffith of Los Angeles.

Eleanor Seavey

Miss Seavey made her debut with the buds of 1920-21, belonging to the Sewing Circle of that year as well as to the Vincent Club. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Seavey, who spend much of their time at "Foxcroft," as their Hamilton estate is called.

Mr. Griffith is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Perry Griffith of Los Angeles.

Society Notes

MRS. FREMONT SMITH will spend a portion of the Summer at Bar Harbor, Me., where the Boston colony is larger than it has been for a number of years.

Mr. and Mrs. Houghton P. Metcalf of Providence spent the "Fourth" at Narragansett Pier. Mrs. Metcalf was formerly Miss Katherine Herrick of Milton.

Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyck Wendell, who have recently been spending some time in Boston on account of the death of Mrs. Wendell's mother, Mrs. Edward Foote, will spend the Summer at their place at Cazenovia, N. Y.

Mrs. Huntington Wolcott Frothingham of New York is visiting at the Beverly Farms home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Lee. With Mrs. Frothingham are her two small daughters.

Mrs. Alexander Sedgwick of Stockbridge has been in Newburyport for a visit with her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Phillip Marquand.

CHILDISH PRANK NEARLY FATAL TO BOY

A childish idea of a practical joke nearly cost the life of five-year-old Raymond Borden, of No. 57 Norfolk street, Cambridge.

The little Borden boy and some companions were playing in the flood near the Technology buildings on the Cambridge side of the Charles River.

As the youngster clambered into a boat nearby, his little playmates shoved the boat off and it started to drift down the river.

The child, becoming frightened when the boat began to move, leaped into the water.

Just about that time William F. Martin, of the Metropolitan Park Police was passing under the Cottage Farm Bridge in his motor boat. He heard the frightened cries of the drowning child and hurried to the spot.

Martin in his boat reached the spot just as the boy was about to go down for the third time. Martin succeeded in seizing the little boy and dragging him into the boat.

Without losing a moment's time Martin stretched the boy out in the boat and applied first aid treatment. The child was revived and brought to shore, where he was turned over to his parents and taken home.

22 DEATHS NOW LAID TO GERMAN BUTCHER

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

Berlin, July 7. (Universal Cable).—Paralleling in some respects the Chicago millionaire boy murderers case, unreasonably surpassing the Franks case in the almost incredible horribleness of its details, are the developments in connection with the Hanover murderer, Haarmann, a butcher by trade.

The police already believe they can count twenty-two murders upon this man. Without exception all his victims were youths or young men whose mysterious disappearance had been one of the greatest puzzles to the police.

Traces of nothing worn by his victims and for some unaccountable reason kept for sale by Haarmann, now have been identified by relatives of the slain youths.

Some analogy is seen in the case of the Russian murder-monster, Nicolai Zukor, the police trainer, recently arrested in Poltava, charged with the murder of forty persons. Nearly all of Zukor's victims were girls and thirteen bodies already have been found.

MINERS RESUME, UNION IS NOT RECOGNIZED

Charleston, W. Va., July 7.—Mines in the Kanawha coal field of West Virginia will resume operations under a modification of the 1917 wage scale, in which the union will receive no recognition, D. C. Kennedy, secretary of the Kanawha Operators' Association, announced today. The new scale calls for the 1917 tonnage rates and slightly higher pay in day rates.

The mines had operated under a union agreement up to March 31 last. Since that date the operators have been negotiating with union representatives, but all efforts to reach an agreement failed. Six companies resumed operations at once.

COFFEE MARKET IS DOWN TO 10 TO 20 PTS.

New York, July 7.—It was apparent from the action of the coffee market this morning that the Brazilian revolution had been discounted in European buying last week. At the opening today prices broke 10 to 20 points under active selling for both European and domestic account, representing profit-taking. September contracts dropped to 14.73 and December to 14.58.

ENGLISH DROP RODEO CHARGES

Hendon, Eng., July 7.—Court summonses which had been issued against Tex Austin and other promoters of the rodeo in the Wembley Stadium and cowboys participating in it, charging cruelty to animals in the steer roping contest, were dismissed today.

The summonses had been issued on application of agents of the Hon. Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

AMERICANS, IN PARIS, SLEEP IN BATHROOMS

Hotel Hall Cots $10 a Night as Tourists Swarm in French Capital

By C. F. BERTELLI

Paris, July 7.—Olympic athletic events at Colombes Stadium, the polo match between the United States and Argentine at the St. Cloud Country Club and the big President's cup race at the St. Cloud race course kept fashionable Americans on the jump.

The Prince of Wales, in a light gray derby, wide, gray trousers, bunched in at the top, and a double-breasted waist-coat and Ascot tie, probably was the only man who attended all three events.

The Prince left the embassy with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Munn, his American friends from Philadelphia, and saw the opening events at Colombes.

Then he speeded 14 miles to St. Cloud and watched the President's cup race. From there he shot over to the Country Club, where he ineffectually begged to be allowed to compete in the preliminary canoe.

Dozens of Americans, who joined the exodus to Vichy and Aix-les-Bains, following the Grand Prix, are now returning.

Hotels are so crowded that many Americans arriving on the Zeeland and who neglected to make reservations, have been obliged to occupy bathrooms or walk the streets all night. Hotel cots in hallways cost $10 a day.

JAPAN PLANS 100 P. C. TARIFF ON LUXURIES

Tokio, July 7 (A.P.).—With a view to curtailing the importation of luxuries, encouraging thrift and balancing foreign trade, the government introduced in the Diet today a bill providing for an ad valorum duty of 100 per cent. on 250 articles listed as luxuries.

The effect of the proposed heavy duty on American trade with Japan would be comparatively slight, inasmuch as Japan purchases from the United States principally staple articles, such as cotton, machinery and iron, it was pointed out.

Finance Minister Hamaguchi, explaining the bill, declared that it was a temporary measure, not intended as a revenue producer, but proposed as a means of protecting home industries.

U. S. FLIERS START FOR BENDAR ABBAS

JAILS AND FINES TRIO ON BOOTLEG CHARGE

In the South Boston Municipal Court today, Judge Josiah Dean bore out his reputation for severity toward bootleggers, when he sentenced three first offenders to three months in jail, plus fines of $100 each. The defendants were Tony Dorcelly, 27 Gold street; Coleman Joyce of No. 237 Tudor street, and William J. Baganski of No. 837 Dorchester avenue. Sentence was imposed and was held in $500 bail. Joyce and Baganski paid and their jail sentence were suspended by Judge Dean.

SOCIALISTS TO QUIT DEBS FOR LA FOLLETTE

Senator Will Be Endorsed for President at Cleveland Today

By CHARLES MILLER

Cleveland, July 7. (Universal)—The national convention of the Socialist party will not nominate Eugene V. Debs, but will endorse Robert M. La Follette for President of the United States.

This was virtually determined at the first four-hour session of the convention at the Winton Hotel, when, after a more or less bitter debate, a committee of fifteen was elected and ordered to report to the convention today at 10 o'clock on the attitude the party shall take toward the Progressive movement.

For two hours the "La Follette groupe" and the "straight Socialists" maneuvered for control of the committee. Twenty-six were put in nomination and the 250 delegates proceeded to ballot, each voting for fifteen names, the party rules requiring that all important committees must be elected and not appointed.

The section of the party favoring the endorsement of the candidate named by the Conference for Progressive Political Action at the convention is believed to be in absolute control of the committee.

Elsie and Joseph Holding Forth Is True Lovers

"I have not contemplated divorce. At times he was temperamental, had a good nature, but always was true. We shall be reconciled."

When upon uptown in New York, Mr. Schildkraut says:

"How can we be reconciled when there never was a break? Can a headless man be beheaded?"

On the order of Captain Herbert W. Goodwin of the Lagrange street station, twenty boys and young men were arrested for walking on the grass, sleeping on it, and throwing paper about.

"It will go on until we have the Common cleaned up," said Goodwin. "It is a pity the women and children of the congested districts couldn't be allowed to use the Common without permitting the vagrants and loafers to do their sleeping there, but as conditions stand I shall arrest everybody caught violating the ordinance."

The total number of arrests now is sixty-five. Those first arrested for disfiguring the Common was fined $5 each.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

INQUIRIES are coming so thick and fast these days that I am going to try to answer them in groups. Today I will try to take in all those that have asked for dainty desserts, and the uses of gelatine.

The pies and hot puddings of our grandmothers day have lost some of their popularity. The modern palate seems to want something attractive to look at that will gratify our sense of taste and not make too serious demands on our digestion.

There are any number of desserts that can be made from gelatines that are delightful to the eye and pleasing to the palate.

Gelatine is not limited in its use to desserts alone. It is of service in making many other palatable dishes from soups to desserts. Gelatine is valuable also in making dainty dishes from left-over meats, vegetables, fish, fruits, etc. It is also good in combination with milk and cream to make two pounds of butter grow where but one pound grew before.

BUTTER MINUTES—Take the ton cream from a quart of milk and add enough of the milk to make one pint. Soak one heaping tsp. gelatine in two tbsps. of milk (cold) ten minutes; place in a dish of hot water until gelatine is thoroughly dissolved.

Cut one pound good table butter in small pieces and place same in a dish over hot water until butter begins to soften; then gradually whip the milk and cream into pint altogether) and dissolved gelatine into the butter with an egg beater. After the milk is thoroughly beaten into the butter, add salt to taste. As long as any milk is seen keep on beating until all is mixed in.

Place on ice or in a cool place until hard. If a yellow color is desired, use butter coloring. The remaining milk from the quart may be used for other purposes.

The butter mixture will do the work of ordinary butter for table use, for baking cakes, muffins and every butter except frying and the big advantage of treating butter this way is that you can always have the best grade at less than the cost of the same quality of low priced butter.

PINEAPPLE SPONGE—One-half envelope gelatine, yolks of three eggs, grated rind of one lemon, 2 tbsps lemon juice, ½ cup sugar, few grains salt, 2-3 cup grated canned pinnapple, 1-3 cup cold water, ¼ cup heavy cream, whites of three eggs. Beat yolks of eggs slightly, and add grated rind, lemon juice, sugar and salt. Cook in double boiler, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Remove from range, and add gelatine which has soaked in cold water five minutes and pineapple. When mixture begins to thicken, add cream, beaten until stiff, and whites of eggs, beaten until stiff. Turn into a mold first dipped in cold water, and chill.

Remove from mold to serving dish, and garnish with whole and half slices of canned pineapple around the edge of which there is a piping of whipped cream, sweetened and flavored with vanilla and maraschino cherries.

STRAWBERRY MARSHMALLOW PUDDING—One-half envelope gelatine, 4 tablespoons cold milk, ¼ cup pineapple juice, 1 tablespoon lemon juice, 3 tablespoons powdered sugar, 1¼ cups cream, ¼ pound marshmallows, ¼ cup canned pineapple, 1 cup strawberries. Soak the gelatine in the cold milk ten minutes and dissolve over hot water. Cool.

Cut up marshmallows and soak in pinnapple and lemon juice for an hour. Whip the cream and the powdered sugar and into this strain the dissolved gelatine, beating all the time. Add strawberries and pineapple cut in small pieces, and the marshmallows. Pour into a wet mold. When ready to serve, turn out and garnish with whipped cream and whole berries.

SALMON MOLD—One envelope gelatine, 2 tablespoons cold water, yolks of two eggs, 2 tablespoons salt, 1 teaspoon mustard, few grains cayenne, 1½ tablespoons melted butter, ¼ cup milk, 2 tablespoons vinegar, 1 can salmon. Soak gelatine in cold water five minutes. Mix egg yolks, slightly beaten, with salt, mustard and cayenne; then add butter, milk and vinegar.

Cook in double boiler, stirring constantly, until mixture thickens. Add soaked gelatine and salmon, separated into flakes. Turn into fish mold, first dipped in cold water, chill and remove to bed of crisp lettuce leaves.

Poor Fishing

Drawn by WALT VAN ARSDALE

7-5-26 Copyright, 1926, by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

FOR hours they have been fishing. As a matter of fact, only a perfectly idiotic little fish would be fooled by such absent-minded efforts. Do you wonder they cannot keep their thoughts on angling? The sun is shining, a gentle, cool breeze is blowing off the river, they are "knee-deep in Summer." Do they know they are unsuccessful? Why, they don't even realize that their lines are in the water. They have no memory of throwing them there.

He is trying for a prize infinitely more precious than the fishes that go their merry way quite safe from angling dangers—this time. If he is successful, he knows that HER happiness and his shall be secured for all their lives. Poor fishing? I wonder! From her rapt, eager, joyous look the chances are that it is a Glorious, a Wonderful day for fishing! —WALT VAN ARSDALE.

WAYS OF A HUSBAND

SEQUEL TO "WHEN A GIRL MARRIES"

By Ann Lisle

"YOU look fit as a daisy," he said. "And I'm so dead beat it does me a lot of good just to look at you."

"What's the matter, dear?" I asked.

"The armature of Ruth's first model came in yesterday," said Jim, trusting me to understand the technicalities of sculpture. "And neither of us liked it at all when she got the clay on."

Ann Lisle

"And it's tiresome boasting, isn't it?" I questioned sympathetically. "Of course, you both feel a little discouraged now. But probably the second model will be better, since you've found out what not to do."

"Ruth feels so discouraged that it's pathetic. When a magnificent woman like that breaks down it's rather dispendous."

Jim spoke as if he were thinking aloud. After a moment of revolt, I recognized that he was paying me the compliments of taking my broad-minded interest and my complete sympathy for granted. So I managed to key my answer to the pitch I thought Jim expected.

"You'll stand by and see her through. Probably your faith and encouragement at this minute are just as important as the posing itself. Now you're contributing something very big to this work."

"You little peach," cried Jim, getting up from the chair into which he had slumped and coming over to put his arms about me.

"I'll do as much for you some day."

"What did you mean?" I asked.

Jim ruffled my hair, smiling at me inquisitively in the glass.

"Oh, when you're discouraged about something that means a lot to you I'll try to find just the right thing to say. It's great to be understood and to be given just the right word of encouragement."

I smiled up at Jim as I said slowly:

"You can do a lot for me right now if you're not too tired to have a little confab. I was hoping could be out early and—help me. I've started something I'm not sure about seeing through. I'd like to feel that you were with me on something that strikes me as a big deal."

With the ready gallantry which is so charming, but which I've learned not to count on from Jim, he responded:

"I'm not too tired to talk over anything that means a lot to you, my dear. You don't often get frightened about your business judgment, which I'm certain is of the best. But if you want a shoulder to lean on, here it is."

As Jim spoke he pulled me to

BEATRICE FAIRFAX ON BEAUTY AND SANITY

By Beatrice Fairfax

DO you wonder why the market is flooded with anti-fat remedies and beauty creams, and why women struggle to earn the means to support their struggle to be young-looking and fair, though fatty?

Today found me lunching hastily at a soda fountain. I had a long, cold glass of buttermilk and a Swiss cheese sandwich on rye bread. About three hundred calories of wholesome nourishment.

To my left sat a pasty-faced girl who had augmented her lack of beauty with peroxide on her hair. Blue powder to accent her pallor, blackened eyelashes and a general air of desperate eagerness to look attractive. She rushed in, banged on the counter with her vanity case to get the waiter's attention and then ordered in a gay, reckless, challenging voice: "The usual."

"The usual" turned out to be a chocolate ice-cream soda and a jelly doughnut. The pastry complexion was accounted for.

Why are we such self-indulgent creatures that we must lunch on ice cream sodas and doughnuts, knowing that our figures and our complexions will thereafter be laid up for repairs? Why not take a few precautions to prevent the accumulations of fat, instead of indulging ourselves in every possible way until we are ungainly, unsightly creatures and have to destroy the tissues we need never have built up?

Self-indulgence is the bane of our race. We let ourselves become the slaves of appetites which need not have acquired a hold on us if we had valued them properly in the beginning.

Having a habit is one thing. Letting a habit get you is another. And whether it is gin or tobacco or chocolate ice cream soda that you can't resist, in the end you become weak in proportion to your yielding, not merely in proportion to the thing to which you have yielded.

Women long to be loveable. But they refuse to make the little efforts which would produce beauty, symmetry and grace. Daintiness and neatness, sweetness and cleanness are part of a woman's charm.

This may sound like a dietary article. But it is really a plea for the beauty and loveableness and sanity which doesn't come from or to folks who put themselves either mentally or physically on ice cream and pie rations.

PARIS SENDS NEW IDEAS

Paris: A type of tunic frock much worn in Paris this season is illustrated in the left hand sketch. Over a black satin underskirt it wears a bellited tunic of black and white printed chiffon. The lines are close and the silhouette very narrow with the exception of a flare at the lower edge of the tunic, where there is a circular flounce of crepe. Very short sleeves and a bateau neckline makes this a most practical costume for Summer weather.

Champagne-colored marocain is used in the frock at the right. The collar and sleeves are trimmed with pleated rolls of the fabric and the double flounces which form the apron tunic on the skirt are also pleated. The apron ties at the back with short tash ends. Black crepe marocain is likewise employed for this model and makes a very smart frock, though less "summery" in effect.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Car Strap Or Man's Arm?

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When a lady and gentleman are standing together on a street car, is it proper for the lady to hold to a strap or to the gentleman's arm?

(2) When a lady and a gentleman are in church together, should the lady contribute to the collection or does the gentleman's contribution suffice for them both?

(3) When a gentleman is a guest at dinner where should he be seated?

(4) Where should the young lady whose guest he is be seated? When there are small children, one boy and two girls in the family, where should they be seated?

A. H. M.

IT is better, if she can, for her to play the role of clinging vine to her own strap.

(2) And this, too, calls for independence. This contribution stands for her personal generosity; and it is so personal—or should be—that no one else can, or should be allowed to make it for her. If anyone makes this contribution for us, it is still the other person's contribution, not ours. In such contributions we cannot shift the spiritual or financial responsibility.

(3) The gentleman, if he is the only male guest, or if he is to be given the honor place, should be assigned the place on the right of the hostess.

(4) There is no special assignment for her. The place of honor for the gentleman is on the right of the hostess, and the place of honor for a woman guest is on the right of the host. After these places have been assigned, the guests are seated according to personality and convenience.

CAN CHICKIE COME BACK?

Start Today This Story of a Boston Girl's Fight to Build Her Life Anew

Now he said: "We'll be jaunting down to see her week after next, eh, mother?"

Jennie smiled; tears rushed fresh to her eyes. She pulled at Chickie's hand; held it hard. For there came a whistling; a snorting of the train. Jonathan reached for the suitcases.

Jennie said: "Oh, now—you'll go? Going, Chickie, dear?"

Chickie smiled bewildered, repeated: "Oh, now—" and swept her arms about her mother, clung to her and clung and in that moment would have given up her life to have them hold her; keep her with them.

Jennie's lips moved softly: "Going, Chickie dear? Oh—oh—" It was like sobbing.

Chickie said: "Mother, mother, darling—there—oh, goodby—" and took the thin, soft hands, oh gently, from her neck, pressed the young, sweet lips on Jennie's faded cheeks.

Still Jennie cried and wouldn't let her go. Then Chickie laughed and with a little gay move took her handkerchief, wiped Jennie's eyes. She said: "Mother, you love me? Oh, you do!"

And grabbing up the leash went stumbling after Jonathan.

Jonathan carried her bags, brushing the porters aside. He set them quietly at her place. He passed his hand over his face that was so gray, it hurt Chickie to look at it.

She lowered her head against him, pleading: "Ho, Jonathan, weakening?"

There went a trembling through him, the rugged chin doubled. But he raised her face in his hands—that way he always did. He said: "Ah, Chickie—Chickie girl—" and stooped down quick and kissed her . . . said again—"Chickie—my Chickie—pray God—pray God—"

She closed her eyes—heard him shuffle down the aisle. Alone—she was all alone now.

Suddenly she remembered that they would wait there until the train was gone and she got up in a panic, rushed to the platform. Another look—see them again.

They were there—straining their eyes. They saw her. Jennie cried out. Both of them waved—began to laugh. They kept waving. Chickie blew kisses to them. Jennie took a little step toward her, called; the train began to move. Soon they grew smaller, faces blurred.

Still they waved—smaller—now dimmed—now gone—now swallowed in the dark.

Rails humming; rushing her away; from them; from all the old, familiar things—into the future.

And she was afraid—yet smiled above her hammering fears. Oh, brave—they said she must be brave—stand up quietly and battle. Jonathan asked that of her—only that. And there might come to her again a beauty—even a richness and a peace; even a healing of the wound that ached and ached within her heart.

Chickie didn't ask this. Oh, no! Ask nothing.

She stared now with blinded eyes into the dark; marked out the lights on the city's hills. She fancied Jonathan's hat still waved at her; fancied that Jennie wiped her eyes.

She peered into this night that dropped like a wall between her and them, closing her out from that happier time—oh, those thousand days when she had laughed so blithely.

Finished all that. She wanted it so. Finished all joy. Let her go in quietness with bowed head and lowered eyes, unnoticed, forgotten.

Tragic thing to ask of life when one is young—just twenty-two. But this was Chickie's prayer.

She lay in her berth that night wide awake. When tears crept from her eyes, she wiped them slowly. Again, when she wondered why she had been beaten so, why she had been branded so, she made her lips smile. Past—all that was past. She must wipe it out—all of it, begin again.

Oh, not so hard—going away. That made it easy—lose herself in a city of strangers. Finally she had decided on New York. No one knew her there. No one would stare and whisper when she passed.

She would work. She would make no friends. Only the dog. They would take long walks.

She turned her face against the pillow for suddenly Mary stood before her, then Janina, then Jimmy, his lips shaking: "You don't love me—isn't that reason? But if you change—"

No—never wrong Jimmy like that and her heart all dead the way it was—

Jimmy passed. Now it was Jake who came and took her hands—kissed them in that kingly way of his—

Brave for them . . . Oh, yes, she could be brave!

Such a thing as they had asked! Such a fight to put upon her—soft, trusting thing; soft, loving thing.

But she got off the train that sunny morning in the early Spring.

She raised her head proudly. She smiled seeing a girl like herself caught in her father's arms. But when a young man rushed through the crowd, swept boldly in his arms a girl with a baby and there before everyone hugged the two of them, kissing them again and again—when Chickie saw that she turned away. She tugged at Wildie's leash and hurried.

Not so easy, perhaps—not always easy—

But she walked resolutely. She kept saying to herself, "Never mind—never mind—"

It was that afternoon Chickie found her new home; found the scene for the fresh, hard battle. A quiet place—roomy and comfortable.

"Yes—Wildie could stay here—Mrs. Banks loved a dog. That was the determining fact.

Now Chickie sat in the large, bare room. There was a white iron bed, a white dresser, a neat, faded pink carpet on the floor. The high walls were covered with calcimine, those thousand days when she had laughed so blithely.

Finished all that. She wanted it so. Finished all joy. Let her go in quietness with bowed head and lowered eyes, unnoticed, forgotten.

She sat with her hands clasped, Wildie at her feet. Sometimes she tried to read. Images marched relentlessly. She dozed, dreaming the baby lay in her arms. She touched its face gaily. Suddenly there was one standing at her side. And he stooped, ran his fingers through the silky hair, saying all boisterously and laughing: "Looks like me, frail—like me!"

Oh, she was not Janina. She couldn't ride the open sea and laugh when the shore was nowhere to be seen.

Enough of Life

Martha Blake came to her gently. She sat at her side. They read poetry together—but that was terrible to Chickie. Finally she reached out her hand and closed the book. Martha said: "Chickie, you are too young to be vanquished."

"But I am, Mrs. Blake—oh, you see that I am."

"No, Chickie, there is much that is rich and fine in life."

"I don't want it—I don't want it! Oh, I've had enough of life—you don't know—"

"Perhaps I know a little, Chickie. Some of the most beautiful flowers in the world grow in a harsh and bitter soil. You mustn't refuse to let them grow—"

"I don't want them."

"You have to live, Chickie. You have to meet bravely the new life that will come to you. You can not be like all the poor, unhappy women of the world accepting the old traditional brand; taking the scarlet letter from their dress and burning it on their souls. Isn't that very old fashioned, Chickie? Didn't you tell me there were free, braver things today?"

Past Shadows

That night Jonathan stood beside her chair. He caressed his shoulder, saying valorously: "Suppose my girl and me and our dog go out for a walk?"

The ghost of Martha Blake and what she said, Chickie went. She held to Jonathan's arm. She lived through her head high. He wanted that—proud old Jonathan.

But harsh, Dillon roared, talked with deep, abrupt, startled "Oh!" Then swiftly: "Good evening, Chickie! Good evening, Mr. Bryce!"—and hurried on, red with embarrassment. Chickie only caught the astonishment on Barnby's face as though it were a shocking thing that she should walk in the sweet evening time; walk quietly and laugh with Jonathan.

Oh—the past was her shadow—she couldn't put it from her . . . It walked at her side; it crowded her to the wall. She said to Jonathan: "Oh—you see—now you see. Jonathan, let me go—let me go away—"

He ran his hand down his cheek back and forth—"Ah—ah—you want to go away?"

"I want to die—if you could only know how much—"

"Chickie, girl, you won't do that. You would hurt your old dad so?"

"Oh—after all I've done—"

"No—now—what did you do? Why, you had a little child, and your old father would have taken it—didn't you know that—"

A little will laugh—and Jennie—oh, that would have killed her—

"Hush—hush—now—"

"Will you let me go, Jonathan? I have to work again. Oh—I could never start in here—I could never face them all—I could never be alone—maybe not as long—"

"You're all I have, Chickie—"

"Oh you kill me saying this. Just for a while—just for a while—"

"Then let us go too."

But she wouldn't have this—it was too much that way Jennie touched her hands—the way Jennie's lips so often twisted and her eyes were wet on Chickie's face—

Jennie said to her: "So you want to leave—you want to go away?"

"Oh—only for a while—for a little while, mother—can't you see—"

So they took their hearts and crushed them in their hands. They said, "If you must, Chickie—if you must—then go—not for long—not for long—"

She wrote to Jake. "You are so good to me. It makes me wish to cry. And I dare not do that, you know. I'll write soon—in a few weeks. You can not know how much I thank you."

A thousand times there might come this Spring. They were not for her. It was painful that she turned so resolutely from every glad and happy thing that she said to herself so insistently, "No—it's not to alone."

There was no love left in her heart. She had emptied it.

There was no laughter in her spirit. She had denied it to her. No chord of joy would ever again respond.

So Chickie felt—and faced a future destitute of youth, of sparkle, faced it grimly, even proudly.

Those first nights in the new home she wrestled cold, quiet about her. She went down to the dining room, bowed to her neighbors; spoke to none. She was so aware of the stealthy glances accosting her; unaware that the white beauty of her face was an astonishment and a lure. It would always be.

Afterwards she took Wildie and walked swiftly through the strange, new streets.

Tomorrow she was going to work. The typewriter company where she had registered had said so. The position was with a broker, a firm—the type of work Chickie understood.

Yet she had a reluctance to begin; an overmastering fear. And she sat on the hill wishing frantically for some assignment that the world might come to an end or a tidal wave sweep up—

Someone spoke to her: "You're very long—"

CHAPTER CXII

SHE stood in the room they had made so bright for her. She took quietly the things from her bureau. Then she knelt before her open trunk. It was twilight in the room.

She knelt there. Tears were in her eyes. She wondered what it was that made her cry. Oh—it was leaving them, perhaps—oh—it was everything.

And as she knelt, there came a step—Jonathan, of course. There came a sound and someone knelt beside her. It was Jimmy. He put his arms about her. One hand with a piercing gentleness took hold of hers.

She tried to run—tried to get away, feeling suddenly her life all broken and his with it.

But he lifted her. He said, "Chickie, do you want me, now?"

She turned hard against him, pressing her face low on his arm: "Jimmy—let me go—" And stifled the moans that tore what little heart she still had left; love it all to two.

Then she felt that Jimmy cried. He was crying, too. He said: "I love you, Chickie—don't you want me now—let me take you away—"

"Jimmy, let me go. Oh, if I could only die. On Jimmy, there isn't any place in the world, nor any one, nor anything. And if anyone really loved me do you know what they would do? They would come in here tonight when I am sleeping; they would come and kill me. I would do that thing myself except for Jonathan. He said, 'Don't forget—'"

Jimmy only said: "No—not that, Chickie—do you want me—why don't you take me now—"

He said: "I've done you too much wrong—I've hurt you so—it could never be—never—oh, I would be a vampire in your eyes. Every time I looked at you, it would be there—"

"I don't think of you that way, Chickie. I don't think of you that way. I never would. You mean because of things I've said?"

"I don't understand, Chickie. Can't you see? I've loved you at ways. You need me, perhaps. Don't you go away alone."

His held her hands in both of his she stopped and pressed her lips to Jimmy's hands. "You're good, Jimmy darling. You're good. No—don't. I couldn't—oh, not now—not now—not after that. You don't know, Jimmy, but there's nothing left of me—nothing at all."

Gentle, Sweet

Jimmy drew her to him. But he didn't speak. She could tell that his lips were shaking, and his hands, too. He said, quietly: "It's because you couldn't love me, Chickie. Is that under the broad, prominent forehead. She caught an impression of something wistful—over delicate in his mouth. He smiled, revealing his excessive youth—but it was a magnetic smile, somewhat pathetic. Or it seemed so, to Chickie.

The father and son went into a little private office. Half an hour later the father left.

Then Lee Willman rang Chickie's phone. "Would you mind taking some dictation, Miss Bryce?"

Afterwards this seemed to Chickie a gesture of fate, ironic and terrible.

"You're new here, Miss Bryce?"

"Yes."

"But your home is here?"

"It is now."

Lee Willman's eyes narrowed. "Oh, you're living alone?"

Chickie glanced at her note book slowly. "Well, Mr. Willman, not exactly alone. I'm one of eleven now counting Wildie."

"What's Wildie?"

"A dear friend of mine who differs from other friends by reason of two extra legs and no questions asked, ever." Chickie glanced up in time to see the flash of a smile and a faint color on the young man's face. She was surprised to find the old gift of finesse coming so readily to her tongue.

"Indeed! Then your friend Wildie and I haven't much in common. So you've brought a dog along? I suppose you're planning to go into the movies?"

"No."

Lee Willman laughed—a short, infectious laugh. Almost immediately the brown eyes sobered. He said with a touch of vehemence: "Well, don't start to do the typing tonight. It'll be in tomorrow afternoon."

He rose when Chickie did. When she reached the door he said suddenly: "By the way, is this the first job you've had since you came here?"

"Yes."

"Do you like it? You're satisfied?"

"Yes." He nodded, surveying her frankly. Chickie's eyes mocked him. He colored.

In the dressing room Eloise Maxwell, with the most studied grace, powdered her nose. In her imagination she would watched her slightest gesture. She said languidly that her services today. He hoist the pure sex girding for the battle.

Betty Ordin now began to giggle. "I hear he's to refuse the old man's coin."

An indignant, suppressed "Who said so? The Idea!"

Betty persisted: "I heard it on good authority. From someone who knows his sister. He's just dead set against the girls of his own crowd. Calls them all 'vamps' and 'vites and won't look at one of them. So you see!"

"Yes—I know. I heard that he's writing a book about money being a poison. And he's saying horrid things it about women of today and they're going to the devil. The poor nut!"

"Then get away from that mirror, will you?"

All afternoon eyes moved with stealthy anticipation to the door. Each time it opened, the air sharpened with quickly indrawn breaths.

At 4 o'clock Lee Willman entered. He seemed to flash through the outer office with his tall form, moving rapidly with restless, half contemptuous looks about him. He came to his father's desk. It chanced that Chickie was taking dictation. She glanced up, eyes. She heard a deep toned voice: "I'll wait—finish that."

He waited there. Presently Chickie felt him watching her, felt his glance like a heat on her face. It grew nervous.

Then his eyes moved to her hands—back to her face. She felt stifled.

Norp Williams said: "That will do—"

As Chickie rose, Lee Willman picked up a pencil from the floor. He offered it to her. She saw his face with its extraordinary lighted eyes—large, brown, deep set

But if you change—if you want me at any time—I love you, Chickie. It's hard to let you go alone."

"But I must, Jimmy—yes." She raised her face then; she met Jimmy's dark, fine eyes. She said, "Jimmy, you may write me. Oh, it will help so much. Jimmy, you're good to say these things to me. Oh, you have a noble way to love."

Jimmy turned his head away. Chickie knew that it was because he felt a strengthening; felt a certain pride awake within her thought.

Then he turned her down when Jimmy left. She clasped her hands against her lips. A thing that was gentle, that was like a flame in it. Yet Chickie thought her. Oh, people loved her, even not. Oh, Jonathan had gone to Jake—Jake knew. Jake came, and Jimmy, man now. Jimmy who had loved since he was a boy because she was pure—because she was an angel—Jimmy loved her yet.

Tears, but not all bitter now, were on her face. Worthy—oh, they would ask that of her, only that. Brave—go bravely. Let the deep, rich flowers Martha spoke of grow. Plant them in her sorrow—plant them deep. And there might come about her a spirit, even as in her face—beauty that is of stars and lilies.

HERE IS THE FINAL INSTALMENT OF CHICKIE---NOW START THE SEQUEL

THE moments dragged. There was a tapping of feet, a scraping of the chairs. Someone went to the window and raised it. Still the jury was out.

A sharp exclamation: "They're coming—"

The foreman read: "It is the verdict of this jury that the infant known as Merle Clayton came to its death by natural causes. We recommend that hereafter the physician in charge report similar cases to the coroner."

The lawyer Jake had sent drove them home. Jonathan held her in his arms as though she were a child. She cried. He whispered: "Crying, Chickie girl—we're going home. Don't be crying now, for Jennie—don't do that, Chickie girl."

They drove into the hushed and quiet street, and a light was in the window. Chickie pressed her face against her father's arm. She said: "Jonathan—don't take me back—oh, I wish we weren't here—"

"Little Jennie—think what today has been to her—come, brave now—you won't cry when it's over, will you—"

And he carried her up the steps. And in a moment Jennie's hands were clasped about her face and they drew it down and wept on it.

Then the light came and the sun and there were flowers everywhere. Jennie was standing at her bed. Janie said: "There are letters, Chickie dear."

It was late in the next afternoon. The letters were from Janina—swift, passionate things. She wanted to come. "Chickie, let me come—I want to see you. I want to see you. You can't imagine how this hits me. Please—let me come."

She sent her flowers—who sent the beauty of the Spring to her?

Jennie said: "There is a note."

CHAPTER CXI

THE flowers were from Jake—and the note, too, was from Jake.

This was the note: "Little White Darling—Don't let this sadness rob or cheat you. Take it as a richening of your life. You can. Helena dear—you are going to do this. We must see that you do. In a little while, when you are rested, let me come."

Oh, no; she wouldn't see him—see no one. Never hear a word of love again. All that was ended. Leave here alone, then she could keep her lips all quiet; then she could even smile.

She sat long hours in the little Summer house Jonathan had built. She wrote to Jake. "You are so good to me. It makes me wish to cry. And I dare not do that, you know. I'll write soon—in a few weeks. You can not know how much I thank you."

WOODS AND VILLA BOUT PUT OVER FOR TWO WEEKS

BAD COLD HITS SCOT HARD BLOW

A heavy cold contracted early in the week that refused to yield to treatment has resulted in the bout between Wes Wills Woods, South champion, and Pancho Villa being called off. The show was slated for tomorrow night but because of the illness of the little Scotchman still he put over for a couple of weeks.

Woods reported at Fulton's camp with a slight cold. His trainers believed the daily workouts would shake it off. However, it developed so bad that a physician was called and advised the lad to call off the Scotchman were bright lessons of his gameness and ability to assimilate punishment.

In addition to this fact, Woods himself is a most punches and needs a knockout in either hand. Word had gone to Frank Carbonell, manager of Villa, that Woods' fighting forces against the hard-hitting Woods he was sending his charge against the bear.

Reports coming from New York said it that Villa had trained diligently for this bout and was in the best of shape. Because of the interest aroused and the remarkable showings that Woods has made in Boston in last few starts Boston fandom will not trade it for two weeks hence to be announced by the Armory Club in the near future.

NO. CAMBRIDGE THREATENS TO QUIT

Manager Dan Leahy of the North Cambridge team denies that Lawrence won the first half of the Twilight League race. He asserts that as a result of the victory North Cambridge won yesterday over the Cornets of Lynn, a tie exists for first place.

Manager Leahy thereby ignores a ruling by President Claude Davidson which upheld a forfeited game given Lawrence over North Cambridge.

Leahy says that unless this forfeited game is played off he will withdraw his team from the second half of the race. The game in question had to be stopped when the crowd swarmed on the field at Lawrence, which prevented the game from getting half way. It was forfeited by the umpire and Lawrence given a 9 to 0 victory.

The final standing of the league gives Lawrence 19 victories and three defeats and North Cambridge 18 victories and five defeats. Leahy says it should be 18 and three for each team.

The Cornets were beaten yesterday mainly through a tremendous clout by Jay O'Connor, the North Cambridge first baseman, over the right field fence, with McGrehan and Cote on base.

Cote's brilliant fielding also saved the game in the eighth his catch of a line drive prevented McGrehan from advancing from having issued two bases on balls.

U. S. OLYMPIC FENCERS IN SEMI-FINAL ROUND

Paris, July 7.—The United States Olympic fencing team this forenoon went into the semi-final round by defeating the Swiss team, from whom they won by a close margin. The score was 7 matches to 7 with 2 matches tied, but the United States fencers received three fewer touches.

Great Britain, Holland, Cuba and Switzerland, with two defeats each in the second round, were eliminated, so that only the United States, France, Spain, Belgium, Portugal and Italy remained in the team competition.

The Americans showed good fighting qualities, Milner, Breed and Calnan winning 15-6 matches each, while Shore won one of his matches and Milner and Shore fought to matches. Calnan lost two, Breed two, Shore two and Milner one.

DOMINION ATHLETES WELCOMED BY WALES

Paris, July 7.—The Prince of Wales won on his first day's visit to the Olympic games and began his second at a ball attended by 500 guests, including all the British and Dominion Olympic competitors. Wales shook hands with the entire delegation of athletes after reading a message from HRH George wishing them, as patron of the British Olympic Association, all possible success.

This official business over, the Prince set about dancing in earnest.

LADKIN MAY ENTER THE CHICAGO DERBY

Chicago, July 7.—Eight or ten of the best three-year-olds in the nation will start in the Chicago Derby, a mile and a quarter to be decided at Hawthorne next Saturday afternoon. The race, with $15,000 added, will have a value of about $20,000.

Harry Sarnoff, A. Murphy, general manager of the course, said tonight that he hopes to receive the entry of Ladkin, owned by August Belmont. Ladkin won the $5,000 Dwyer stakes at Aqueduct.

SCOTCH GAMES TO BE HELD AUG. 2

Despite the fact that many of New England's athletic performers are abroad for the big Olympic games, Chairman John Speirs of the Boston Caledonian Club is going ahead making all arrangements for the coming Scotch Caledonian games that will be held at Caledonian Grove, West Roxbury, Saturday, August 2.

The Walter Scott mile will again feature the program. Tom Cavanaugh of Boston College is being primed for the race and is expected to run away with his first win on the beautiful trophy.

Ben Chynowath will have all his work cut out to win, for among other contenders he will meet Little Joe Doherty, the Tufts runner, who already has won two legs on the trophy, and if he wins another he will have permanent ownership of the prize.

In addition to the Walter Scott Mile there will be an open 100 yards handicap, 220 yards, 440 yards, 880 yards run, 2-mile runs, while the usual field events, including the running high jump, running broad jump and tossing the caber and other Scottish events will be staged. Entry blanks for the games may be had by writing John Speirs, 10 High street, Boston, Mass.

ROBERTSON MAY BUY SHARE IN NORFOLK

Dave Robertson, manager of Richmond of the Virginia League last year and who was placed on the retired list when he refused to join Atlanta, has applied for reinstatement. It is reported Norfolk is after him as manager and that there is a possibility that he will buy an interest in the club.

Socony is the "Amplifier"

© 1924, S. O. Co. N.Y.

by The Veteran Motorist

A LOT of us have had more or less experience with various amplifiers in our radio activities, and not always with the best of success. But when it comes to getting the most out of a motor car, we have found that Socony Motor Oil is the amplifier par excellence.

Not only does it ceaselessly fight friction in all moving parts, but it also resists to a high degree crank case dilution—a frequent condition where the careless motorist uses some unknown gasoline, rather than the reliable Socony.

The first cost of Socony Motor Oil is not great, but the amount it saves in the protection of all wearing parts is enormous. It is super-plus insurance against engine depreciation, an absolute assurance that the maximum power and performance of any engine will be delivered when and where needed. It amplifies any motor to the utmost of its efficiency.

Don't accept a substitute.

For transmissions and differentials, use Socony Gear Compound or Socony Gear Oil. See the Socony Chart.

U. S. ATHLETES TAKE THE LEAD IN OLYMPIC CONTESTS

FINNS NOW TRAILING YANKS

to the last hurdle there is a question whether his record will be allowed.

America suffered a set-back in the 400 metre low hurdles when Charles Brookins, the Iowa star, who crossed the line second to E. Morgan Taylor, of Grinnell College, the winner, was disqualified for interference at one hurdle at the turn, and second place was given to Vilen of Finland.

The first of the three semi-finals of the 800-metre run was captured by Stallard, one of the British aces, in the fast time of 1 minute 54 1-5 seconds, with William B. Richardson, United States, not pressed to take second place from Martin, of Switzerland. Stallard won by nine yards.

The third semi-final of the 800 metres saw two wearers of the shield, Ray Dodge, Oregon Aggies, and Schuyler Enck, Penn State, finish one two with a thrilling burst of speed that carried them past Hoff, the Norwegian star. Paulen, of Holland, made a wild dash in the last 25 yards that almost nipped Enck and Hoff, who set the pace most of the way. Thus all four Americans qualified for the finals, which will be run tomorrow.

GLAD ENGLAND HAS NO CONVENTIONS

New York, July 7.—Speaking at West Side Y. M. C. A., the Rev. Frederick W. Norton, pastor of City Temple, London, said: "Having been here during your convention I read the newspapers and looked behind the scenes. I would not say, of course, that the United States should have a king. That would be foolish. But I would not say, either, that Great Britain should have a President. I am glad we do not have Democratic conventions in England."

HORNSBY SETS FAST BATTING PACE

Chicago, July 7 (A.P.)—Rogers Hornsby, batting champion of the National League and star second baseman with the St. Louis Cardinals, is out to establish a new National League record by leading the circuit in hitting for the fifth consecutive year, and with the season approaching the half-way mark, is continuing the pace he set at the opening. He is slapping the ball at a .397 clip, according to averages released today.

Hornsby has equalled the famous record of Hans Wagner, who led the National League batsmen four consecutive years, in 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1909. The St. Louis player led in 1920, 1921, 1922 and 1923. Wagner's best mark was .380, and Hornsby bettered it with .401 in 1922.

Snyder, New York, is closest to Hornsby, with .383; Wheat, Brooklyn, follows with .380; Kelly, New York, .376, and Fournier, Brooklyn, .351. The latter now has 14 home runs, while Babe Ruth, champion home-run hitter, has 18.

Other leading batters are: Frisch, New York, .345; Grigsby, Chicago, .348; Hartnett, Chicago, .326; Bressler, Cincinnati, .329; Roush, Cincinnati, .325.

In the American League, Jamieson of Cleveland is leading the pack with .362, followed by Babe Ruth, with .360 and Ty Cobb, of Detroit, third, with .355.

Ken Williams of St. Louis is edging towards the top with an average of .349.

HARRIS THINKS HE HAS REAL STAR IN TAYLOR

Washington, July 7.—Buchy Harris believes he has obtained a star of the first order in Third Baseman Taylor, from Memphis, of the Southern Association, who was received in trade for Third Baseman Prothro and Outfielder Carr Smith.

Bamville Nine to Play

Jean Bedini's "Peek-a-Boo" Company nine have accepted the challenge of the Siesle and Blake "In Bamville" team to play baseball, the game being scheduled for tomorrow on the Boston Common.

BRAVES SPLIT TWO WITH DODGERS

Brooklyn, July 7.—After Jess Barnes hurled the Braves to a brilliant victory in the first game by the score of 4-1, Brooklyn came back and annexed the second game, 5-0.

"Dutch" Ruether in the box in the second game was an enigma, the Tribe reaching him for only four hits.

Dazzy Vance, ace of the Brooklyn staff, pitched the opening game and when he wasn't sticking 'em out the Braves were hitting him hard. Although he struck out nine batters the Tribe reached him for 11 solid swats.

The Dodgers reached Barnes for only five hits.

It was a different story in the second game, however, and although Cooney pitched well, he had one poor inning in which the Dodgers scored four runs.

In the third inning two passes got Cooney into trouble. Andy High and Johnston walked and Zack Wheat knocked High in with the first run of the game.

In the fifth inning, Brooklyn put the game on ice, knocking Cooney out of the box. Stryker replaced him. Neis singled to open the frame. When Taylor hit to Melrose, Bob Smith dropped a perfect throw and both men were safe.

Ruether then forced Taylor but High angled in right. Neis scoring. Johnston went out but Wheat was passed, filling the bases. Jake Flowers cracked out a single which sent home Ruether and High and a single by Brown off Stryker scored Wheat.

Thereafter, Stryker was invincible and held the Dodgers scoreless.

YACHT REGATTA HELD UP BY LIGHT WIND

Although there had been a large entry list in the open regatta of the Mosquito Fleet Yacht Club, it had dwindled down before the starter's gun had been fired. Hardly any wind was noticeable and only two boats went over the course.

The two previous days of yacht racing combined with the fact that it was almost impossible to get any speed, due to the lack of wind, prevented many yachtsmen from turning out. Many yachts from nearby places were unable to get to the starting point in time for the race.

The race was postponed for an hour in hope that a light breeze would turn up. There were very little wind, however, but the racing brought out some keen competition among the boats.

The outstanding feature of the race was in Class A for twenty-five footers and over, between the only two boats competing, Chewink II, owned by M. A. O'Leary and the Coleman, owned by W. N. Coleman.

Mr. O'Leary, who is a delegate to the Democratic convention, came over the road from New York in order to sail his own boat and came out with first honors. During the two previous races Mr. Cohan had been the victor.

Only two boats were in Class I for 18 footers and Dr. A. V. Cogan's Bonitwo, after giving the Dorothy a three-minute handicap, was an easy winner. The Cost passed out the Demon in their dual race. They were in the Sonda Boat class.

The summary:

Yachting News

The first of a series of elimination races among the 15-foot boats of the one-design class of the Quincy Yacht Club was sailed over an eight-mile course off Hingole Neck. The boats coursed over into the Hingham channel and to the buoy off the government wharf at Peddock's Island and then home.

The Wee Scott eliminated the Quiney Boy, the Edith W. eliminated the Cleo.

At Annisquam races were held in two classes. A moderate southwest breeze prevailed throughout, affording the best sailing conditions thus far this season.

Alden French, in the Cat class, piloted the Sea Mouw into first place.

Owing to light breeze in Massachusetts Bay, the Eastern Yacht Club was unable to complete race from Marblehead to the entrance of the Cape Cod Canal. Most of the fleet passed through the canal at night and the squadron will attempt to reach Vineyard Haven today.

* * *

An interclub race was sailed in Quincy Bay between the Bay Bird boats of the Wollaston Yacht Club and the dory class boats of the Squantum Yacht Club. The Wollaston boats finished first. The race was over a course of seven miles from the clubhouse to Nut Island, to Long Island and home.

VACATION FOR BOSTON FANS TODAY

This was one of those rare days in July, when no ball game was on the schedule, and the overworked fan had points of time to recover from the extra long week-end. The Red Sox get home tomorrow to open a double-header series with the Browns, while the Braves are headed away to the interior for another swing through the Western ball yards.

The Sox will be glad to get home. They have been treated roughly in their little swing through the East. When they left town, they were within a short reach of the pennant. Now they are down in the depths, but the lowness isn't what you could call serious.

The native club still has plenty of chance to get back into the fighting, can do it by cleaning up three or four games in a row anytime.

The club is certainly due to regain. Ike Boone, whose hitting was a big part of the earlier drive, will be back in the game at home. Joe Harris is hitting the ball again and feeling normal once more. The pair started their remarkable Spring scene at the Fenway, so it's quite natural he should be expected to put on a Summer performance.

More than a fortnight at the home stand should build up the morale and spirits of the club. The hoary one's fortunes have been due to pitching more than anything else. With Hal Piercy back on the job, apparently as good as ever, that important department should perk up immediately.

TILDEN IS WINNER OF WESTERN NET TITLE

Indianapolis, July 7.—William T. Tilden of Philadelphia, national tennis champion, added another title to his ever-growing list here when he defeated John Hennessey, Indianapolis, in the finals of the Western tennis championship. The scores were 6—2, 6—1, 6—2.

Hennessey, who proved the sensation of the tournament by eliminating B. I. C. Norton of South Africa, and Harold Patterson of Australia on successive days, was completely submerged by Tilden's superb pace. Both players found no play from the back lines, with the champion's perfect placements to corners of the court giving him a decided advantage.

ANDERSON WINNER OF FRENCH GOLF CROWN

G. Anderson, runner-up to the American amateur golf championships in 1921 and 1923, won the French national amateur championship today by defeating the English crack, Cyril Tolley, 1 up.

Tolley, who gathered in the French open title last Wednesday, played fine golf and led most of the way today. The Britisher, however, missed a short putt on the 18th green in the second round and had had luck on the 16th when his ball, apparently dead in the cup, bounced out. Anderson took the lead for the first time at the 14th hole of the second round, becoming 1 up.

France Sends Ganay To Fight for Honors

By FRED C. LANE.

ALTHOUGH America holds supreme in the majority of sporting events yet every so often one of the European countries comes to the front with a sensation in some certain line that overshadows our local talent.

We have reference to Gustav Ganay of France, that sensational and one of the gamiest pace followers to ever come to these shores.

Not since the days of Leon Didier has that country contributed such a splendid athlete to the bike game.

Ganay is a typical Frenchman, highly nervous temperament, thin of body but with muscles of steel and that set determination to win at all costs first and foremost in his mind.

To gain fame at the tender age of 21 years is exceptional, yet that is what this French boy has accomplished in a short span of years. He attracted the attention of Manager Butler two Winters ago when the promoter was abroad seeking talent. His debut the Summer following was sensational.

Though not as fortunate as some of the foreign riders that have come to these shores, his racing qualities, combined with that ever prevailing gameness, always insures the spectator of thrills which account for his being the favorite of the bike fans.

Ganay has only been chasing the motors a short time. Previous to taking up this style of riding he was a road racer. At the age of 17 he won his first big race from 300 competitors over a course which connects Marseilles and Lyons.

Previous to this he indulged in the sport more as a pastime to divert his mind from his law practice. His career as a bike star was cut short by the war.

He answered the call of the colors when but a mere kid. In a year he was made a lieutenant. This honor was bestowed upon him for bringing down four German planes at the battle of Verdun.

At the signing of the armistice he returned to the bike game.

Ganay is young and strong, has many promising traits which perhaps accounts for his presence being requested at all the tracks ready to do business for Genaro at the right time and believes he will have a legitimate kick if the Genaro ruminage is sidetracked in favor of some other contender.

Franklin Genaro is the most logical contender for the chance at Abe Goldstein's title and Bernstein cites the following reasons:

Genaro has taken a decision over Carl Tremaine at a time when he was recognized as the most logical contender for the bantamweight championship. Franklin has a stronger claim to precedence in this matter than Pancho Villa, who, if he understood, will be one of the Goldstein challengers, since Franklin has beaten Pancho.

GENARO OUT TO GET BOUT WITH GOLDSTEIN

Franklin Genaro, despairing of bringing about a meeting with Pancho Villa, has now made the first move towards a meeting with Abe Goldstein, the bantamweight champion of the world. With this object in view, Phil Bernstein, manager of the American flyweight title holder, has visited the New York State Athletic Commission with the object of filing a challenge accompanied by the required forfeit of $2,500 on behalf of Franklin Genaro for the right to meet Goldstein for the bantam crown.

Owing to the fact that the Boxing Commission does not accept challenges until twenty days previous to the signing of the six months' first privilege with a stated total of $1, George A. Barker and John C. Malone tied for second. The club's next open shoot will be held Labor Day.

SPORT BRIEFS

W. H. Jackson was low gross and J. L. S. Barlow won the net prize in the medal handicap play for members of the Winchester C. C.

The Concord Rifle Club held an open shoot over its range at Bristol Hill. Salvadore A. Malone won the first prize with a grand total of 61, George A. Barker and John C. Malone tied for second. The club's next open shoot will be held Labor Day.

NEW EVIDENCE IN DEATH OF AIKEN BABY

Police to Question Supposed Owner of Article Found Near Murder Scene

Providence, July 7.—In spite of the fact that the details of the autopsy on the body of three-year-old Viola Aiken are being kept secret, Attorney-General Herbert L. Carpenter, Chief of Police Allaire of North Smithfield and other investigating authorities admitted they are positively convinced a crime was committed.

They also admitted that they are now on a hot scent in their efforts to find the person who caused the child's death. Indications point to the vindication of the baby's mother, Mrs. Viola Aiken, now confined in the County Jail, and her sweetheart, James Graham.

Two new bits of evidence were found today by Chief Allaire, and these are expected to help materially in the quest. One of these the police refused to reveal until the supposed owner of the article can be questioned tonight.

The objects were found about forty feet from the spot where the child's body lay concealed for weeks. One of them is a man's home-made, cotton handkerchief, on which the hemstitching is peculiar.

A woman will be questioned today whose story may mean the clearing up of the entire mystery which has engrossed the Rhode Island authorities for more than five weeks.

FALL RIVER MAN GAVE HIS LIFE TO SAVE GIRL

Mystery in Drowning Solved When Miss Green Tells of Heroic Act

Somerset, July 7.—The mysterious drowning of John Travers of Fall River in the Taunton river was officially solved when the authorities arrived at the conclusion that Travers sacrificed his life to save Esther Green, his companion.

After telling various conflicting stories concerning the affair, Miss Green, who lives at No. 21 Tremont street, Taunton, came forward with a story that the authorities are ready to accept.

Her latest account of the tragedy was to the effect that while the couple were standing at the end of a dock near Wilbur's Dance Pavilion, the girl was seized with a dizzy spell and fell into the water.

Travers followed her into the water and held her up until their cries had attracted aid. Then, exhausted, he sank, and a moment later the girl was rescued.

Fearing that their clandestine meeting would be made public, the girl said, she failed to make mention of the fact that Travers was in the water to the dance hall crowd which had hurried to the scene.

When Travers' body was discovered floating in the river by children, the police undertook to question Miss Green, the last one to be seen with Travers before his disappearance.

The conflicting stories told by the girl then caused District Attorney Stanley P. Hall of Taunton to announce that an inquest would be held.

SOMERVILLE MUSIC STUDENT MISSING

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph G. Nichols of No. 403 Highland avenue, West Somerville, have asked the Somerville police to search for their son, Wesley Gaylord Nichols, twenty-two years old, a student at the New England Conservatory of Music and a violin teacher, who disappeared on June 22, last.

Nichols left the following note addressed to his mother: "What of years of study toil, and pleasure to find the mind and conscience empty." He took two suitcases with him, but apparently little money. Nichols was six feet tall, weighed 150 pounds and had a scar on the side of his neck.

of all our Kuppenheimer and other Good Clothes, Hats, Furnishings & Boys' Clothes at Notable Reductions from our Regular Prices

We hardly need to dwell upon the vast size of the stock, the wide variety of the styles or the high quality of the merchandise presented in this sale, or even that the reductions are made from the regular prices at which the goods have actually been selling until now. These things go almost without saying.

In spite of all sorts of "sales" and "special" events galore, our regular prices have stood unchanged throughout the season because originally so low for the quality that not one of these supposed-to-be alluring offers has seriously challenged this Live Store's greater value giving.

But the time has now arrived for our usual mid-summer housecleaning and we name bona fide reductions on our regular low prices for the purpose of making that complete clearance which our policy demands in order that no goods shall be carried over to another season.

Welcome to Boston!

BOSTONIA CONDITA A.D. 1630

National Convention 1924

—Because we know the splendid fidelity, comradeship and public spirit of those Boston citizens who wear the purple of B. P. O. E.—

—Because people everywhere are well aware of the thousands of quiet acts of kindness done in the name of Charity by the great Order of Elks—

—Because all Boston has given itself up to a week of demonstrating real New England hospitality to our guests—

We, ninety-three retail stores of Boston are proud and glad to extend our united greeting of welcome to each visiting member of B. P. O. E.

Elks Sure to Enjoy Sail Down The Harbor Today

No effort has been spared to see that the visiting Elks enjoy themselves while attending the convention, and the sail down the harbor today will give the visitors an idea of Boston's hospitality. "We have provided everything we could think of for the pleasure of our visiting brothers," says Charles A. Kelley, of the committee. "Box lunches for everybody—cards for the ladies and for the men. Fiche cigars because we know they will be popular among the visiting Elks as well as with us in New England."

FIRST COUPON FOR MOTHERS' OUTING TODAY

On page two in today's Boston American is printed the first coupon for the Boston American's outing at Nantasket Beach for mothers and children. If you desire to go on this outing clip it out.

On Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week other coupons will be printed. If you desire to go on this outing clip them out.

On Saturday bring the five coupons and ten cents to the American office, at the door No. 288 Devonshire street, between Winthrop square and Summer street.

They will entitle you to one round trip ticket to Nantasket Beach, and a tag with coupons attached which will entitle you to refreshments, consisting of cake, milk and ice cream. Also admission into Paragon Park free all, admission to Hilarity Hall in the park for the boys, admission into the whirlpool for girls, and admission into other amusements in the park, for five cents.

FIVE COUPONS NEEDED.

Remember: Five coupons out of any one paper will not secure the privileges of the excursion. They must be clipped on five successive days, beginning with Monday's paper and ending with Friday's.

Be Warned! Applications must be made at No. 288 Devonshire street office! REMEMBER the tickets and tags for the first excursion. The first excursion will be held on Tuesday, July 15.

Caution! Do not take coupons clipped from the American to the boat and expect to obtain tickets there.

Do not put off obtaining your tickets and tag at No. 288 Devonshire street until Monday or Tuesday. They must be obtained on Saturday for the following Tuesday's excursion.

Only three tickets will be issued to one person. Every ticket will require a complete set of five coupons.

On your ticket will be printed the hour the boat will sail from Rowe's wharf, Atlantic avenue, the hour it sails from Nantasket. If you miss this boat you will have to pay the regular fare, thirty-five cents each way.

FEAST FOR ALL.

Keep in mind that the Boston American has obtained for you, through the kindness and public spirit of Frederick L. Lane of the Nantasket Steamboat Company, Francis S. Cummings of the Francis S. Cummings Milk Company, J. Howard Bushway of the Bushway Ice Cream Company, Sales Manager Sargent of the Berwick Cake Company, and "Daddy" Frank Archer of the Movie Company, hospitality and privileges of the Paragon Park and H. Sarkin of the Sagamore bath houses, more concessions for your ten cents than the ordinary boy could buy on an ordinary occasion for two dollars.

Manager Lane of the Nantasket Steamboat Company has put two of his splendid excursion boats at your service. These boats are each licensed to carry 1,500 persons. So each excursion is limited to twice 1,500 mothers and kids, or 3,000 on both boats.

If you cannot get away for the first excursion do not dispair. There will be four of them, one every Tuesday for four weeks, beginning July 15. The same rules apply to all of them.

The tickets for each outing must be obtained the Saturday before the Tuesday on which the outing is to be held.

MRS. DILLINGHAM SUES FOR DIVORCE

Paris, July 7 (I.N.S.)—Mrs. Charles Dillingham, wife of the well-known New York theatrical producer, today filed suit for divorce in the Seine tribunal.

VETERAN HUB THEATRE MAN IS DEAD

The older generation of theatrical people have lost another of their numbers. Joseph Charles McGarry, guide, philosopher and friend of many people of a generation ago, is dead at his home No. 20 Village street, South End.

Born in Boston 63 years ago, Mr. McGarry was educated in the public schools, and at an early age entered the theatrical business. He served in many capacities and finally became advertising agent for John B. Schoeffel of the old Park Theatre. This position he held for eighteen years and exercised a wide influence in the profession. Actors in the flush of their glory would call upon him, often finding him helping out another friend who had fallen into hard times.

He leaves behind him a long list of friendships which embraces men in all walks of life.

He had continued active connection with the theatres, although most of his old time friends had long since retired. He had lately been a special officer at the Tremont Theatre.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma McGarry. Funeral services will be held Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross. Burial will be at St. Joseph's Cemetery, Brookline.

BRAZIL SENDS FORCE TO END INSURRECTION

Buenos Aires, July 7 (A.P.)—Sao Paulo, largest coffee centre in the world and capital of the country's wealthiest state, is reported still in the hands of the insurrectionary forces which took possession of the government buildings Friday night in a sudden uprising marked by sanguinary street fighting.

Two battleships, carrying troops, are reported to have arrived at Santos, but from there Sao Paulo can only be reached by a cable railway which ascends 5,000 feet, being otherwise inaccessible except through difficult mountain passes.

According to official statements by the Brazilian government, the insurrectionists consist of a small garrison of federal troops, but numbers circulating here are that the Sao Paulo police, militarily organized and French trained, joined the movement.

Among the explanations of the uprising given here is one that it represents an effort by certain elements in Sao Paulo state to secede from the Brazilian federation, declaring its independence and inviting other states to join it in establishing a new government with the city of Sao Paulo as the capital.

MEDBURY SAYS...

By John P. Medbury

THE different automobile accessories have done away with the old-fashioned method of telling time by the sun, but many an hour can be read from what is in pockets and churches.

A COUPLE walking down to the altar have nothing at all to worry about.

THERE are no speed limit signs along the same.

IT would help them both if there were pleasant readings "Bad grade ahead" or "No curve."

ANOTHER good one would be "Dangerous in all weather."

EVERY church aisle should have a sign marked "Detour."

THIS would give either the bride or groom a chance to escape at the last minute.

A COUPLE taking the matrimonial journey have no road maps to go by.

THERE only guide post is the divorce column in the newspaper.

OF course any of their married friends could tell them about the road conditions.

WHILE the matrimonial highways aren't paved, they're usually hard.

THE roads going are good, but they're generally rough coming back.

BEFORE going on a journey the wise thing to do is to get some touring information from somebody who's been married four or five times.

WARNING cards should also be tacked up in homes. No parlor should be without a "Stop, Look and Listen" sign.

blister, as children often do, any germs accumulated are persistently and continuously rubbed into the tissues and into the blood circulation. With no protecting stocking between the foot and the leather.

The plaster the child the more probability of a neglected wound. And boyish courage, unfortunately, is no protection against germ attack.

CHILDREN with feet completely bare are in less danger. The sole of the foot becomes hardened. There is no chafing of the skin, no rubbing of germs into and through the cuticle. Feet bare compel caution in walking and running. And from a bare foot, rushing through grass and weeds, germs are rubbed away, not held and rubbed in.

HOW DO the English hold their great Empire together? How do they keep 300,000,000 Asiatics in order, with only 100,000 Britons in all India? You get an answer in the death in China of Edwin C. Hawley, and the action taken by the commander of his British Majesty's ship Cockchafer.

HAWLEY, murdered by Chinese junkmen—w h i c h means piratical seamen, NOT dealers in "junk"—was not even a British subject. He was "only" an American. But he was employed by a British firm, and that was enough for the British sea captain.

HE LANDED his men, compelled the Chinese authorities to execute two of the Chinese junkmen as a little lesson to the others. And then he compelled everyone of the high Chinese officials of the Sze Chwan province to walk humbly behind the bones, and the murdered American's funeral.

THE CHINESE authorities "protest" against such rudeness by the commander of the British warboat. But that won't do them any good.

Our State Department "makes representations" about the murder of an American citizen and that won't bother China.

WHAT impresses the Chinese and others scattered around the world is the simple direction of a Briton, when he thinks his nationality has been insulted. "Skest thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings."

A man that is not diligent and earnest in his business, where British dignity is concerned, does not stand well before the British King.

MISS WILLS, the wonderful young girl from the wonderful California climate, has shown extraordinary and precocious power against the crack players of Europe. She and Mrs. George Wightman on Saturday won the championship in the women's doubles in England.

THESE victories mean to this country much more than mere athletic victory. The brain does more than the muscles in a game of quickness and skill. Every movement of the muscle starts in the brain. Speed depends on mental power.

That is why the French are so proud of the marvelous Mlle. Lenglen. She typifies, in her way, the power of the French brain.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By Dr. F. X. Mahoney

Boston Health Commissioner.

AT this season of the year when the mercury is high and we are more or less careless about the dangers that lurk in the food we eat, the number of cases of typhoid fever is quite apt to increase. Typhoid germs are carried in quantities in the feces, placing almost on the tongues of suffering sufferers. The eye or tongue that examines the soils or the bones may also be scratched or slightly cut.

These injuries at once start to scale. This is nature's way of caring for the injury by pumping extra blood to the scene of the trouble and this causes swelling. This compresses should be applied at first, to keep down the swelling. After the swelling has been set, the applications are generally more painful than the cold ones. Hamburger steak in water at about 110 degrees is the right temperature.

Keep the injured parts perfectly still. If you catch yourself with your hand able to control the action, bandage the injured part and if necessary put in a soft splint. In any event, when the sprain is serious call a physician at once.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

What causes a cancer and is it possible to cure it once it has started? B. C.

The exact cause or origin of the cancer and removal of cancer to prevent death from cancer is the study of the cancer specialists of the country. It is hoped in time to understand your family physician will be able to cure cancer. Until that time the treatment of cancer is the cutting out of cancer.

My baby frequently has diarrhea and vomiting and fever. What is the cause and what I can do for him? Mrs. F. B. D.

The first thing to do is to consult your physician. Then you could prepare the following: Two cooked apples, mashed fine, with a cracker dipped in smooth. Keep the bowels moving by means of castor oil. Do not feed solid foods for a few days instead of milk.

It seemed good for me to give to my personal baby this "health of things" every day, but I have been told it would be good for her. M. K.

Use of cereal tablespoons of thoroughly cooked vegetable each as spinach, etc., for baby, to put through a ricer and puree once a day.

Poor Woman Helps

Editor Helping Hand:

I have several articles of wearing apparel that I would like to give to some very needy person, and one that could call for them, for I am poor myself. SWITCHES FOR 3-TUBE SET

Switches installed like these above permit the elimination of jacks, which, at best, are something of a bother to install and likely to be the cause of obscure trouble. The various stages are cut in and out as follows:

1. For detector only—switch S-1 is thrown to the left (terminals marked 1).

2. For detector and one stage—S1 is thrown to the right (terminals marked 2) and S2 is thrown to left (terminals marked 1).

3. For detector and two stages—Both switches are thrown to right (terminals marked 2).

The phones are connected permanently to a pair of binding posts as shown. If filament control is also desired, this may be added by the use of three pole, double throw switches.

100 METERS, RADIO FANS, IS SECRET OF SUCCESS

Broadcast listeners in England have been picking up American stations on two and three "valves," as they call 'em over there.

How do they do it?

No 100 meters.

"Way out to Hastings, Neb., they pick up KDKA in another Pittsburgh" is possible to rebroadcast on regular wavelengths, whatever the atmospheric conditions are.

How do they do it?

No 100 meters.

Even the English stations can receive broadcast KDKA and WGY Schenectady.

How do they do it?

No 100 meters.

The new thrill that the Boston American radio staff is just finding for itself, you guessed it—

No 100 meters.

Engineers have found that broadcasting on 103 meters is much more effective than on the wavelengths in common use.

In addition, there is less static, less interference from power lines and that sort of thing. And there isn't the congestion there is never between single regenerative circuit squeal way down there.

That's what we have been working on, a practical 100-meter receiver that can be built easily, quickly and cheaply with sure-fire results by the average fan.

It's coming in a day or two, complete with sketches, hookup, layout and everything, so easy to build that you can make it up in an afternoon, and drag in KDKA on two 122's on the loud speaker in the evening.

Watch for some more on this tomorrow.

Listening in on the Air

During the day yesterday I hied myself down to Common Street on the South Shore, and listened in on a relief set with a loop aerial. The sun was hotter than blazes on the beach, and I didn't seem to hear that any radio wave could ever penetrate that atmosphere. In consulting the Sunday papers, I found that WGI was on at 5 P. M. with a local program.

After getting the old set warmed up I succeeded in tuning in on the loudspeaker, with volume enough for the entire bathing beach. When you listen to these stations from an out of the way place, it makes you wonder if the artists furnishing the program ever realize the territory they are covering.

Have you ever noticed the reluctance with which some of the older folks are accepting radio? I fixed up a set for an old lady the other day and was somewhat surprised in hearing her say that "she couldn't understand what folks ever saw in those foolish things."

But I noticed that every time I left the room for anything, when I got back, she had the old phones on, with an expectant look in her eyes.

The Capitol Theatre program last night was up to its usual standard of beauty and I tuned it in from WJAR, and found the reception very good from this station. After hearing the same "stock" and "line" type of programs he presents, I have come to the conclusion that he has an uncanny knowledge as to what kind of stuff the radio audiences likes the best.

On last night's program there were several numbers which were presented by the entire Capitol Theatre Ensemble. The one which I remember best of all was Rubenstein's Melody in F.

Just Short Comment

Do you wear glasses with big black rims? Change them. A great authority on the eye says black horn rims interfere with sight, and, of course, they do. The optic nerve must not be worried. And it IS worried if it is all the time wondering and puzzling about two black rims just beyond the nose. Besides, black rims are not solemn, they are foolish.

Juvenile court cases have fallen off more than 41 per cent. in the United States this last year. That is due TO THE RADIO. Give a boy something new and worth while that INTERESTS him, and he will drop the things that are evil and NOT worth while.

But if you give him nothing, his idle hands will FIND something. And what they find isn't always a good thing.

All scientific development improves the human race, from young boys to old men. It interests the mind, and that discourages vice.

This nation invested five millions of dollars in the Chinese Eastern railway. China now tells our Secretary of State that we have nothing to do with that railroad. She will run it, with the advice and assistance of RUSSIA. China won't recognize any claims of American citizens in connection with that railroad.

If Russia "can tie up closely" with the four or five hundred million people in China, that may change things, all the way from Paris to Peking.

But many men have had their grasp on China before and since the days of the Grand Khan, only to have China slip through their fingers like a handful of sand. Making a strong rope out of sand isn't easy.

Hanihara of Japan says that American and Japanese friendship will last. His friendly words are welcome. Of course, the friendship will last. Mr. Hanihara wouldn't want his daughter to marry an American, however much he might respect the American. He would prefer a Japanese. We feel exactly as he does. We don't want to mix populations, in spite of our greatest respect for our Japanese brothers, that's all. Of course we'll be friends.

Ford's $2,000,000 House

May He Enjoy It

Newspapers that don't like Henry Ford, because he has made some of the big banks look very foolish, make a great fuss over the alleged fact that his son is building a two-million-dollar house at Seal Harbor, Maine, which happens to be the Summer residence of John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

Nobody will grudge Henry Ford's son a two-million-dollar house, or a ten-million-dollar house, if he happens to want it, as long as Henry Ford pays wages that enable other men to have respectable houses for their wives and children.

And the people of Seal Harbor won't object, for the Maine men, working by the day are getting the regular Ford wages, $6 a day minimum, no matter what they do.

A few more like Henry Ford, able to make a thousand million dollars by cutting prices and paying wages higher than were ever paid, would be extremely welcome here or anywhere else.

Honor George Fox

He Had Courage

Three hundred years ago George Fox was born. English Quakers will celebrate that three hundredth anniversary. George Fox began THINKING as he watched young friends at a fair drinking too much heavy beer. He wandered around, prayed along, went through all the usual torments of youth, even doubting whether there really was a God.

After that he started out to convert atheists, and succeeded. Finally he built up a great religious sect of his own. It's going yet.

Quakers are no longer as important or as numerous as they once were. You rarely see the simple gray bonnet. But the honesty of the "friends" survives. That has been abundantly proved in their admirable dispensing of funds in the great war.

George Fox is a man whom all may honor. He had the most unusual courage of all. He could ENDURE RIDICULE.

Puzzling Best Minds

A Socialist Booms Stocks

This will be difficult for some of our best financial minds to understand. Poincare was Prime Minister, official representative of the big corporations that he had previously worked with out of office, and he was kicked out.

Herriot, an extremely radical Socialist, came in, exercising the great powers of French Prime Minister. And up went the prices of the French franc and stock exchange values. The big money men of France decided that a Socialist Prime Minister would be better for the country than the representative of the big corporations.

What capital needs most of all is better conditions for the little man. When he is prosperous, organized capital has fatter pickings—whether the prosperity be due to young radicalism, or old conservatism.

New Prohibition Work

More Power to the Enforcers

A new kind of prohibition enforcement is to be tried in New York. Whenever the proprietor of a restaurant or a cafe is arrested, all the people in the place are to be arrested and locked up with him. At least, so the prohibition agents announce.

That seems a little harsh. There are probably few eating places in which some waiter or other employe is not engaged in bootlegging, often without the knowledge of the proprietor.

However, enforcement of the Constitution and respect for law is probably more important even than respect for innocent unsuspecting customers and others. So on with the enforcement. Let us know whether the law or the bootlegger is on top.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

A MAN'S memory is the longest—and the shortest—thing in the world.

* * *

Like a radio it can be shut off or turned on at will.

* * *

It will curl up and go fast asleep, when it ought to be in its wits and then, just as you think you have forgotten what you promised, it will rush to his rescue, like a good watch-dog.

* * *

He never forgets the opening date of the baseball season—and never remembers the date of his own wedding anniversary.

* * *

He never forgets that he owns a monkey-wrench, a shoe horn or a pair of pliers—and never remembers who he did with them.

* * *

He never forgets a woman's first kiss—and seldom remembers her last kiss.

* * *

He never forgets that the doctor said he could smoke if he liked—and never remembers the things the doctor forbade him.

* * *

He never forgets the flattering things a woman said—and never remembers the color of her eyes.

* * *

He never forgets his date to play golf, or a luncheon engagement with a new girl—but always has to be reminded of a business appointment.

* * *

He never forgets a single pair of old shoes in his closet—and never remembers where he put the pair he took off last night.

* * *

He never forgets the "temperamental fit" a woman had—and never remembers what he did to drive her to it.

* * *

He never forgets his cigarettes when he changes into evening clothes—but always forgets his money and the theater tickets.

* * *

He never forgets the brilliant thing his baby said at breakfast—but sometimes has to have a string tied around his finger to remind him that he's married.

* * *

He never forgets the dance the "High-Power Queen" promised him—but manages to forget all those he has with the wall-flower.

* * *

He never forgets that he was once a girl-tamer and a dance-wizard—and never remembers his bald-spot and his increasing girth.

* * *

He never forgets the "big pot" he won—and never remembers the times he lost; he never forgets his wonderful "stroke"—and seldom remembers a dead love.

* * *

No wonder he keeps so happy, cheerful, healthy and young!

* * *

He has the most accommodating, trifle-tion memory in the world. It never reminds him of life's duties, boredoms and little unpleasantnesses—and never lets him forget its promises and triumphs.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

THE nightingale poured out his song, liquid and sweet and clear; he charmed the woodland all night long, and men crept past to hear. He had an ancient tale to tell, as ancient as the race, it was as though he laid a spell upon the quiet place. For, lo! he sang of love and life and rapture and despair, till all the human hope and strife his magic notes laid bare. And ever, throbbing through the strain of song unearthly sweet, there rang an undertone of pain, a hopeless rhythm beat. The lark sang, too . . . a madrigal as old as Earth and Time, he answered to the dawning's call with music half sublime. For when the morning set her feet upon the eastern slope the little breezes, soft and sweet, breathed timid words of hope. Then came the lark with joyous note to banish fear and pain, and from his matchless ardent throat wailed forth his brave refrain. His music matched the morning bright, as up the golden ways he took his rapid lofty flight and voices his song of praise. Ah, birds of darkness and of dawn, what beauty in your songs, whose notes with all that wonder throng for which man's spirit longs!

Husband Left Her

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a young mother twenty-four years old and have three children and expect another in September. My husband has left me. He defaulted a case in court and we have not seen him since. We are in need of clothes very badly. I would appreciate a light coat, size 38 or 40. The children, two girls, four and six and a boy size 2 are in need of clothing. I have nothing for the new baby.

MRS. J. E. K.

For Woman, Size 38

Editor Helping Hand:

Can you find someone to call for some women's things, size 38, within the next week or ten days? There are several dresses, a tweed suit, a hat, all in good condition, and a tan coat which needs cleaning. I am leaving on my vacation the second week in July.

MRS. H. D. W.

Thank you. We have sent you the address of Mrs. D. T. B., a young deserted mother, and have asked her to call for your generous gift.

Sick Man Needs Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a man forty-eight years old and weigh only one hundred and twenty pounds. My decline in weight is on account of my ailment. I contracted malarial fever while serving in Cuba during the Spanish-American War and that has left me with lung trouble. Now I get thirty dollars a month pension and six dollars from the city, but I have only that to live on. I am so run down in health that it is impossible for me to work. I would like a cast-off suit of clothes as I have just one coat and one pair of pants to my name. I am small and take a small 36 coat, and am 59 inches around the waist.

H. A. W.

Mrs. S. Notified

Editor Helping Hand:

I wrote you some time ago saying I had quite a large box of clothing for a boy five or six and some things for a girl twelve or thirteen. You sent me the address of Mrs. P., of Chelsea, but she has never called for the things. I have a lot of good serviceable articles, too numerous to mention, from shoes up. It seems a shame for them to go to waste. If you think it advisable let some other person know of it.

MRS. E. M. D.

Thank you. We have written Mrs. S. who lives fairly near you to call to get the things you offer. Sorry Mrs. P. wasn't more appreciative.

Sends Small List

Editor Helping Hand:

Here is a small list of what I have to give. I hope to hear from some one who can use them, or let me have their address.

E. T.

Thank you for the list. We have sent you the address of Mrs. D. L., who can use both the women's and children's things you offer.

Thanks For Cloth

Editor Helping Hand:

Will you please send thanks for me to the friend who sent me a bundle of white cloth last week. I think it came from Lawrence. I appreciate her kindness very highly.

MRS. A. R.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

We love in others what we lack in ourselves, and would be everything but what we are.

* * *

Self-distrust is the cause of most of our failures. In the assurance of strength there is strength, and they are the weakest, however strong, who have no faith in themselves or their powers.

* * *

He who is false to present duty breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten its cause.

* * *

Mistake, error, is the discipline through which we advance.

* * *

Faith is a higher faculty than reason.

Nothing great was ever achieved without enthusiasm.

DR. FRANK CRANE ON WHAT NOT TO KNOW

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A CULTURED, truly educated person is not one who knows as much as is in the encyclopedia; he is one whose knowledge, great or small, is in order.

Education is not amassing facts, it is learning to classify them.

The man with the most efficient education is not the one who knows things; he is the one who knows where to go to find out about them.

I am proud to state that I cannot bound West Virginia. I do not know what selenium is, and I do not know the names of the bones of the human body. Why should I mess my intellect up with this knowledge for which I have no use?

My fight is to keep books out of my library, to keep papers off my desk, to keep new furniture from being brought into the house, and to keep from eating what I cannot digest.

The eternal struggle is against the superfluous.

For superfluity kills more people than poverty.

I do not want to know how to operate a typewriter, build an automobile, speak Chinese, name the Presidents, repeat the whole of Shakespeare by heart or work problems in trigonometry.

Why should I? It takes all my time and energy to know the trade at which I make a living.

I once made a silly remark to a professor of mathematics to the effect that I did not understand certain intricate calculations. He properly rebuked me by asking: "Why should you?"

It is as good a plan not to learn more than you can use as it is not to bite off more than you can chew.

Efficiency is only half-earned when you know the essentials and do them; the other half is to know what things are nonessential and let them alone.

GARRETT P. SERVISS ON POETS AND STARS

By Garrett P. Serviss

Famous Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

I HAVE lately been reading some "sky rhymes," as a friend facetiously calls them; various attempts to express in verse the impressions of grandeur, beauty, or wonder that the starry heavens, the moon, the planets and other celestial objects make upon the contemplative mind. The result convinces me of the truth of what I have long been inclined to believe, viz., that astronomy, though making of all the sciences the most powerful appeal to the imagination, offers but a stumbling footing for poets. Astronomical facts and laws do not furnish good poetic lines.

And yet, when approached by suggestion, allusion, and from the human side only, these loftiest physical objects of man's thoughts have supplied some of the most exquisite things in English poetry.

Shelley, watching the moon ascend among the stars, paints a picture that fixes the scene for the eyes of generations to come:

"Art thou pale for weariness
Of climbing heaven and gazing on the earth,
Wandering companionless
Among the stars that have a different birth,
And ever changing, like a joyless eye
That finds no object worth its constancy?"

Thomas Campbell, addressing Venus in her resplendent robes of evening star, writes:

"Gem of the crimson-colored Even,
Companion of retiring Day,
Why at the closing gate of heaven
Beloved star, dost thou delay?"

Many years ago, on such another occasion when the planet Mars appeared in all the red splendor of an "opposition" like that of this Summer, Longfellow, standing out in the cool starlight and gazing at the wonderful planet, wrote:

"There is no light in earth or heaven
But the cold light of stars.
And the first watch of night is given
To the red planet Mars."

The four opening lines of an old poem by Mickle on the tragedy of Amy Robsart have always sounded in my memory because of the beautiful description of a moon-gilded night:

"The dews of Summer night did fall;
The moon, sweet regent of the sky,
Silvered the walls of Cumnor Hall
And many an oak that grew thereby."

And how thrillingly light is the touch of Wordsworth describing the canoe-like crescent of the new moon riding the sunset sky:

"Up goes my boat among the stars,
Through many a breathless field of light,
Through many a long, blue field of ether,
Leaving ten thousand stars beneath her,
Up goes my little boat so bright!"

Again Wordsworth:

"The aspiring mountains and the winding streams,
Empress of Night, are gladdened by thy beams."

I like, too, Joseph Addison's:

"Soon as the evening shades prevail
The moon takes up the wondrous tale,
And nightly to the listening earth
Repeats the story of her birth."

Says Shelley:

"That orbed maiden, with white fire laden,
Whom mortals call the moon."

And Keats:

"The moon put forth a little diamond peak.
No bigger than an unobserved star,
Or tiny point of fairy scimitar."

Everybody has seen a bright tip of the new moon appear like that, projecting above the edge of a cloud.

And shall I ever forget my sister singing to me—I think I must have been far this side of the cradle then—

"Twinkle, twinkle, little star,
How I wonder what you are.
Up above the world so high,
Like a diamond in the sky."

ELKS' ELEVEN O'CLOCK TOAST

I.

By WILLIAM F. KIRK
(Chippewa Falls, Wis., Lodge 1326)

Now the clock has struck Eleven
In this hall of mirth and cheer
And a silence falls from Heaven
On the throng assembled here.
Slowly die the fire's last embers
And the night grows still, serene,
While we toast the Absent Members
Who have passed Beyond the Screen.

II.

We behold, with eyes grown older,
Eyes that have a magic scope,
Life's abandoned fires that smolder
On the distant Trail of Hope.
And when Memory is beguiling
And the lights are soft and low
We can see these brothers smiling
As they smiled long years ago.

III.

Friends of old! Departed brothers!
Raise your spirit hands on high,
Toasting vernal Love eternal
That shall never, never die!
Something like to angels singing
Makes this magic hour divine
While the heavens above are ringing
With the strains of Auld Lang Syne!
